The Interesting List
And Mr. Pecora
Do It in Berlin
The Lady's Answers

—By Arthur Brisbane—

SOME, WITH surprise, learn that Mr. Morgan, who paid no income tax to the United States in 1932 and 1931, DID pay income tax in England in both those years. There is, doubtless, a simple explanation, based on the fact that the British know how to collect income tax and write income tax laws.

The interesting revelations from Washington show that the house of Morgan & Company generously allowed appreciative friends to make a little money.

Many wonder why Senator Glass objected to publishing names of Morgan & Company beneficiaries. It surely would not be suggested that there could be anything wrong in holders of public office, past, present or prospective, taking well meant tips from a great banking firm.

Or COULD there perhaps be some objection?

A young man named Pecora is showing efficiency, but NOT earning the deep affection of those he cross-examines in the Washington investigation.

Those who think that emigrants from Europe should hereafter be barred may be interested in the fact that Mr. Pecora is an Italian, brought over here as a boy. He displays a faculty for bringing out facts that the high-spirited native-born don't know how to dig out for themselves.

Some "best financial minds" must remember mournfully the old advice:

"Never write a letter and never burn one."

Representatives of Hitler's German government, on the way to the Chicago Exposition, escaped being mobbed in New York by ladies and gentlemen whom the police describe as "Reds," anxious to get hold of Hans Weidemann, in charge of German exhibits.

One earnest person, carrying a big sign, "To Hell With Hitler," used the sign to hit a police sergeant on the head.

The police can be trusted to impress on foes of the Hitler regime that the place to hit anybody on the head is Berlin, not New York.

Historians of the future will read divorce reports for "local color." One case now "running" provides such testimony as this:

Lawyer—"What do you like to read?"

Lady—"I like memoirs."

Lawyer—"Whose have you read?"

Lady—"Well, there was one about a chevalier who lived in France."

Lawyer—"Who was he?"

Lady—"I don't know. You wouldn't expect me to pay attention to that."

The lady did pay attention to matters more important. She went to a party to a beach club.

Lawyer—"Did you bring anything to drink from your husband's private supply?"

Lady—"Yes, I took two quarts of gin, two quarts of whiskey and a bottle of vermouth."

The same lady, urged by her husband to interest herself in charity boards, told him that such boards were "for the glory of Mrs. Jones and God."

The steel industry, with apparent enthusiasm, welcomes "Uncle Sam as a partner in the steel business."

You have always been told, particularly when anybody wanted to have the people of the United States use Muscle Shoals, which they paid for:

"Government must keep out of business."

But when big business needs the government, to keep banks from closing, or in other ways, the dread of Uncle Sam in business seems to disappear.

New York's solemn "Personal Research Foundation" makes the interesting discovery that both physicians and undertakers are decreasing in numbers. That will cheer the comic writers.

Veterinarians are practically disappearing. You cannot "float" the teeth of an automobile, or "blister" or "fire" any part of a chassis.

Students of New York University select President Roosevelt as "The World's foremost personage."

One year ago the same Mr. Roosevelt was not among the first ten named by the students.

Moral: DO SOMETHING.

The stock market, quite cheerful early yesterday, "slipped off" later. Perhaps some speculators were thinking of the stock that jumped from $20 to $37, from $37 to $57, and then dropped to $1.

Justice Ingraham, of New York's Supreme Court, decides that bonds, mortgages or other obligations specifying "gold payments" may be settled with ordinary American paper money.

That is not only reasonable, but inevitable, since the government won't let you have gold.

Mother Held as Children Victims Are Buried

By Staff Correspondent

Framingham, May 26—While funeral services for the three little victims were in progress today at a not distant church, Mrs. Nellie Dyczheski, 34, was arraigned charged with the hammer and torch slaying of her children yesterday, and held without bail for the grand jury.

Accused of beating three of her four children and setting a match to their kerosene-soaked bodies, the young mother displayed neither emotion nor realization of the enormity of the crime.

"I don't want any publicity about this," was her discordantly naive chiding of reporters who sought to question her.

Three separate warrants charging her with first degree murder in the deaths of her daughter, Irene, 11, and her sons, Chester, 8, and Eugene, 4, were issued by Judge Blodgett. Each was read and to each she was asked to plead.

"Yes, sir," was what she said, staring stonily at the judge who ordered not guilty pleas entered.

Chief Holbrook, who was the only witness, nearly broke down as he told of finding the children's bodies in the charred tenement, but Mrs. Dyczheski listened unaffected, albeit attentively.

Mrs. Dyczheski, before being taken to jail, refused to see her 73-year-old mother, and attempted to attack a sister.

An immediate mental examination was ordered by Judge Collins of Middlesex Superior Court. At Cambridge jail, interviewed by Dist. Atty. Bishop, she said she couldn't recall details of the crime.

Taken to East Cambridge jail, she told Dist. Atty. Bishop:

"I must have done it, but I loved thee children. I want to be electrocuted right away."

State alienists examined her and she was immediately sent to the state hospital in Westboro for 30 days' observation.

In the hospital from which she was taken, the fourth child, Paul, 7, was still in a serious condition.

In the church, where a solemn requiem mass took place, the father, absent from home when the crimes occurred, completely broke down. He and his wife's sister, Mrs. Mary Lynchensky, a friend, John Serette, and the latter's daughter, Josephine, who was a chum of Irene and the other children, were the only mourners, but 800 persons, including playmates of the victims, filled the edifice.

SWEAT SHOP BILL SIGNED BY GOV. ELY

Requires the Label on Goods Made in Poverty Pay Factories

Gov. Ely today affixed his signature to a bill which authorizes the minimum wage commission to compel all sweat shops in the state to brand their goods in such a way as will enable the public to recognize them immediately.

The passage of the bill marks the end of a five-year fight on the part of labor, and is one of the most important achievements on the part of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, whose current expose of sweat shop conditions made it impossible for legislators to dodge the issue any longer.

The pen used by Gov. Ely in signing the bill was given to Sen. William S. Conroy of Fall River, who led the long fight for the bill's adoption.

All manufacturers doing business in Massachusetts who refuse to pay wages at least as high as those fixed by the minimum wage commission will have to make that fact known. Just what wording the sweatshop labels will carry has not yet been decided. But it will be sufficiently clear to enable the buying public to know if the goods are made in factories paying less than a minimum wage.

POLICE TRIAL BEGINS IN HOSPITAL

Nurses, Doctors Called in Back Bay Station Case

Treatment of patients in the accident ward at City Hospital, and the routine of the hospital staff was disrupted today when a police trial board invaded the hospital to try Patrolmen Michael Waldron and Ralph Cohen.

Waldron and Cohen were arrested last Saturday on the charge of breaking into the Kelley Springfield Tire Co. store, 618 Commonwealth ave.

Waldron has since been at the hospital with a splintered ankle, and underwent an operation two days ago.

CALL NURSE FROM BED.

This prevented his appearance for police trial at headquarters today, but Commissioner Hultman ordered the board to proceed, and they went to the patrolman's room, adjoining the accident ward.

Hospital authorities had given permission, it is understood, but instead of proceeding with their own police witnesses, the trial board immediately began calling on hospital executives, doctors and nurses, demanding records and asking that the night nurse, who had just gone to bed, be produced as a witness.

This became necessary, in the opinion of the trial board of three captains, when Max Glaser, counsel for Waldron, asked a postponement because Waldron had been given medicine during the night, making his mental condition hazy.

DELAY IS REFUSED

Miss Isabelle Badel was the nurse who was called. Dr. Frank

Matson of Dorchester to 30 days in Charles st. jail for failure to pay back alimony to his first wife, Mrs Dagmar Matson of Revere st., Beacon Hill. Matson was ordered to pay in July, 1931, but in that same month married a divorcee.

WIRE Your Congressmen

Write or wire your Representatives and Senators in Congress at once urging them to vote for a manufacturers' sales tax to raise the revenue needed by the government. This tax must be levied if the nation is to be relieved of the onerous burden of the income tax, which the rich men evade and which falls so heavily on the backs of the average citizens.

They Hope to Reciprocate, Says W. R. Hearst

DEAR READER:

If the House of Morgan wrote you a friendly letter and said:

"The so-and-so stock is now selling at thirty-seven dollars a share. We lately issued this stock at twenty dollars a share, and we are holding a thousand shares for you at the price of issue—namely, twenty dollars."

What, Dear Reader, would you say?

You would perhaps say:

"Thanks, Messrs. Morgan and Company. Kindly sell the stock at the market price for thirty-seven thousand dollars and send me the difference between the twenty thousand dollars at which you are holding it for me at the price of issue, and the thirty-seven thousand dollars it is selling for on the Stock Exchange."

You would then smilingly pocket seventeen thousand dollars which did not cost you a nickel, and you would doubtless add to your letter the significant phrase which John J. Raskob added to his letter of thanks to Morgan:

"I hope I will be able to reciprocate."

• • •

THAT phrase, My Friend, is the essence of this whole discreditable situation:

"I hope I will be able to reciprocate."

The receivers of these benefactions, these largesses, these gifts of many thousands of dollars from the House of Morgan—

HOPE THEY WILL BE ABLE TO RECIPROCATE.

And Mr. Morgan also shrewdly

HOPES THEY WILL BE ABLE TO RECIPROCATE.

And, My Friend, the receivers of these gifts

DO RECIPROCATE.

"AY, THERE'S THE RUB."

You are EXPECTED to reciprocate, you politely PROMISE to reciprocate, as Mr. Raskob did, and you DO RECIPROCATE, or you do not get any more thousands of dollars as gifts.

• • •

NOW, Gentle Reader, if you are a private citizen it is all right for you to reciprocate if you are willing to accept the money.

You can go around cheering for the House of Morgan and telling your friends that this house is a noble, patriotic concern, loyal to American institutions, and open and above board in its dealings, and that it does pay its taxes and perform its full obligations to the government which protects it.

STOCKS SOAR $2 TO $6 A SHARE

New York, May 26—Bulls kept the stock market on the upward path today by bidding up a wide assortment of specialty issues.

The market milled around rather uncertainly in the middle of the day, but several issues up 3 to day, but several issues were up 2 to 6 or more points including "wet" issues and foods. Commodities were mixed.

Alcohol stocks continued to receive much bullish attention. U. S. Industrial Alcohol rose about 6 points, and American Commercial and National Distillers, 2 and 3. Gold mining stocks were again strong, with Homestake having one of its 15-point upsurges.

HARRIMAN HELD GUILTY IN FRAUD

New York, May 26 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Shientag ruled today that Joseph W. Harriman and the Harriman National Bank perpetrated a fraud upon depositors when it sold them stock at $1500 a share.

In accordance with the ruling he awarded full judgment in the suit—the first of a number of the same kind—of Mrs. Margaret Singleton. Mrs. Singleton sued for the difference between the amount she paid for two shares of the bank stock and what she alleges to be its true value, $200 a share.

The bank has been closed since the March holiday and Harriman is under indictment for alleged false entries in its books.

The court found that the bank had maintained a fictitious market for its stock to peg the price at $1500 while selling it as an "investment" to depositors.

Reaps Millions in 12 States, Pecora Shows in the Howard Grill

BULLETIN

Washington, May 26 (AP)—Testimony was given to Senate investigators today that J. P. Morgan & Co. obtained options on 1,000,000 shares of United Corp.'s stock for $1 each, which it could have sold less than a month later at a profit of about $30 each.

Washington, May 26 (INS)—Turning the spotlight on J. P. Morgan's domination of the vast public utility field, the Senate's banking investigation brought out today that when the Morgan firm organized the United Corp., a great utility holding company, in 1929, it took over an aggregation of utility stocks at $12,000,000 less than their market value.

Ferdinand Pecora, the committee's pugnacious counsel, brought this out through questioning George H. Howard, president of the United Corp., who temporarily supplanted "J. P." and his partners in the witness chair.

The United has holdings in utility companies producing 22 per cent of the electricity and gas used by the American people

These companies serve 55,272,000 persons in 12 states, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

The United Corp. was organized from holdings in the Mohawk Power Corp., the United Gas Improvement Co. and the Public Service Corp. and J. P. Morgan was given these holdings at $12,000,000 less than their market value, Howard admitted.

Morgan Just Swapped Stock to Get Combine

The United Corp. was organized, Howard said, by an exchange of stock. The firm of J. P. Morgan gave the new corporation a sheaf of stock in utilities and the corporation gave Morgan a bundle of its own stock

Howard told how the Morgan firm gave the United Corp. 539,057 shares of Mohawk Power stock, 130,565 of United Gas Improvement stock, and 59,500 shares of Public Service Corp. These were valued

MANY NEW ENGLANDERS ON MORGAN 'FAVOR LIST'

LOCAL NOTABLES OTHER THAN COOLIDGE WERE 'IN THE KNOW'

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

J. P. Morgan's inside stock tips spread all over the country, among the great and near-great. They didn't even miss New England.

Calvin Coolidge, then the only living ex-President of the United States, was the foremost of the New Englanders given a chance to make money in the market on the private advices of the Morgan firm.

J. P. Morgan's inside stock tips spread all over the country, among the great and near-great. They didn't even miss New England.

Calvin Coolidge, then the only living ex-President of the United States, was the foremost of the New Englanders given a chance to make money in the market on the private advices of the Morgan firm.

Others in this section of the country put "in the know" included bankers, railroad moguls and at least one distinguished educator in the person of Wallace B. Donham, dean of the Harvard School of Business Administration.

Morgan's firm promoted two corporations from which melons were to be cut for the insiders. These were the Alleghany Corporation and Standard Brands.

$36,000 PROFIT

Mr. Coolidge, for examble, was allowed to buy 3,000 shares of Standard Brands at the select price of $32 per share. In a few days this stock had risen to $44. If Mr. Coolidge had chosen to sell then he would have netted the tidy profit of $36,000 for himself.

SEN. CARTER GLASS of Virginia, leading financial expert of the upper House, caricatured during the hearing into affairs of the House of Morgan. Squeaking chairs irritated Glass, yesterday.

Standard Brands was worth a net of $12 a share to those who bought on the direct tip from the Morgan House and were willing to sell at once. Alleghany Corp. netted them $17 a share.

The prominent New Englanders, or those with New England connections, who have been revealed by the Senate hearings in Washington as having been put in the favored class for money making without any effort on their part and the number of shares they were offered and took are as follows:

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Standard Brands, 3000 shares.

MATTHEW C. BRUSH, Alleghany Corporation, 2000 shares. He is an ex-Bostonian and ex-general manager of the Boston Elevated. Now a stock market operator in a big way.

ard Brands, 1000 shares. He is the Dean of the Harvard School of Business Administration.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, Alleghany Corporation, 1000 shares. Scion of the famous New England Adams family, two ancestors having been Presidents of the United States. He had accepted appointment as Secretary of the Navy at the time of the stock transaction. Now back in Boston as banker and heavy holder of utilities securities.

CHARLES E. MITCHELL, Standard Brands, 10,000 shares. A Chelsea boy. Became president of the National City Bank in New York. Now on trial for alleged violation of the income tax laws.

DANIEL WING, Standard Brands, 2000 shares. He is chairman of the board of directors First National Bank of Boston, and director of many powerful and prominent New England corporations.

THOMAS NELSON PERKINS, Standard Brands, 500 shares. He is chairman of the board of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and a dominant figure in the Boston international law firm of Ropes, Gray, Boyden and Perkins.

EDWARD G. BUCKLAND, Standard Brands, 500 shares. He was for many years the general counsel of the New Haven Railroad, of which he is now chairman of the board. A familiar figure in the State House when Morgan and Charles Sanger Mellen dominated the Boston & Maine and New Haven Railroads.

CHARLES HAYDEN, Alleghany Corporation, 2000 shares. He is head of the famous banking house of Hayden, Stone & Co., of Boston origin.

ALBERT H. WIGGIN, Standard Brands, 8,500 shares; Alleghany Corp., 10,000 shares. A Medfield, Mass., boy. Became head of the Chase National Bank, which under his leadership grew into being the largest bank in the world.

OWEN D. YOUNG, Alleghany Corp., 5,000 shares. A product of Boston University and once a law professor there. Became head of General Electric. Often mentioned for the presidency, with audible Massachusetts backing.

HAYSTONE SECURITIES CORP., Standard Brands, 5,000 shares. An affiliate of the Boston banking house of Hayden, Stone & Co.

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS, Standard Brands, 2,000 shares. The widely-known Boston banking house.

KIDDER, PEABODY & CO., Standard Brands, 5000 shares. Boston and internationally known banking house.

LEE, HIGGINSON & CO., Standard Brands, 5000 shares. Same as above.

F. S. MOSELEY & CO., Standard Brands, 2000 shares. Of Boston and world-wide repute in securities circles.

OLD COLONY CORP., Standard Brands, 2000 shares. Identified with the Old Colony Trust Co.

JOHN W. PRENTISS, Standard Brands, 1000 shares. A partner of Hornblower & Weeks, who lives in New York.

SPENCER, TRASK & CO., Standard Brands, 2000 shares. Boston brokerage concern.

WHITE, WELD & CO., Standard Brands, 3000 shares. Devonshire st. brokers.

ROOSEVELT IN ECONOMY CHAT

Washington, May 26 (INS)—American policies at the world economic conference were discussed today between President Roosevelt and the members and experts of the American delegation.

Bernard M. Baruch also participated in the discussions, although he denied he was to be a member.

The President summoned the group to the White House. Included were Secretary of State Hull, Senator Pittman (D.) of Nevada, Rep. McReynolds (D.) of Tennessee, ex-Gov. James M. Cox, delegates, and the following advisers and experts: Prof. Raymond Moley, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Tugwell, James P. Warburg, Wm. C. Bullitt, and Dr. Herbert Feiss, economic adviser to the State Department.

It was intimated that the President might name two additional members of the delegation tonight. He is seeking Republican representation, and speculation figured around ex-Senator James W. Wadsworth of New York and ex-Governor Philip Lafollette of Wisconsin.

Farmer Chains Self to Death

Assonet, May 26—William A. Evans, 66, farmer, today harnessed his horse to an old-fashioned carriage and drove about a mile to the shore of Assonet bay.

There he hitched his horse to a tree and, close to the water's edge, drove a stake. He attached one end of a long rope to the stake and the other to a heavy chain around his waist.

Then he waded into Assonet bay to his death.

His son found the body three hours later.

Nevada Prepares for Vote on Dry Repeal

Reno, Nev., May 26 (AP)—Nevada, "wide open" state, which ten years ago dropped its own brief experiment with prohibition, takes its first step tomorrow in the question of dry law repeal. At precinct mass meetings, delegates will be elected to county conventions set for June 10. The county conventions in turn will elect delegates to a state convention called for Sept. 5.

They Hope to Reciprocate, Says W. R. Hearst

and that it does not plunder the public which supports it.

If you are a private citizen you can RECIPROCATE to your heart's content and not do any great harm except to your own self-respect.

But if you are a public official, how are you going TO RECIPROCATE?

How does the House of Morgan expect you TO RECIPROCATE, and how DO YOU RECIPROCATE?

That is a horse of another color.

"A public office is a public trust," said an honest President, Grover Cleveland.

You cannot decently betray the public trust.

You cannot honorably reciprocate private favors at the public expense.

But you are expected to do so, and if you accept these questionable obligations you generally do what you are expected to do.

• • •

YOU vote for the men whom the House of Morgan wants nominated.

You vote for the bills the House of Morgan wants passed.

You shape your political course, and make your political decisions according to the requirements of the House of Morgan, the international institution whose favors and gifts you have secretly accepted with a little secret addition to your letter saying:

"I hope to be able to reciprocate."

If the House of Morgan is interested in having the foreign debts to the American people cancelled to further its international banking schemes, you vote to have the debts cancelled and to load the burden upon the already bent backs of the American people.

If the House of Morgan is interested in getting the American people into the League of Nations to further the Morgan international banking plans, you work to get this American nation into foreign complications even if we have to send our fine American boys abroad to spill their blood on foreign soil in a quarrel which is not theirs nor ours.

* * *

YOU perhaps remember that George Washington warned our people in his last words to keep free from foreign entanglements, but your attitude is:

"To hell with what George Washington said. He never gave me any money. What does John Pierpont Morgan say?"

Your policy is a very logical one. You think:

"I took the gift of money. I put myself under obligations to the Morgan outfit. I cannot honorably betray them."

Very well, gentlemen in public life who accept largess from international private bankers.

How about the American people?

Can you honorably betray them?

Your attitude is perfectly logical, and the logical conclusion is treason to the public interest and perhaps treason to the national interest.

"No man can serve two masters."

* * *

YOU cannot, as public servants, decently take money from private concerns deeply and deviously interested in national politics and international politics and affiliated with foreign nations, and be faithful to your American public trust.

As private citizens you would have more liberty, if not more morality; so the sooner all of you tainted public officials retire to private life, the better it will be for yourselves and for a resentful and contemptuous nation.

Morgan to Stick to Banking if Law Changes Force Split

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service
Financial Writer

Washington, May 26 (INS)—Four days of testimony by J. P. Morgan and his partners in the world's biggest private banking and security distribution business point to two almost certain results:

Regulation of private banking and investment houses of the Morgan type.

A change in present system of taxation, particularly that part that applies to income and capital gains and losses.

Senators, Congressmen and even Wall Streeters here admit this. In both cases, publicity is suggested as one remedy.

If the regulation came about—and there are few who doubt it—forcing a choice by the House of Morgan between banking—the acceptance of deposits and extension of loans—and the investment business, the firm will take the first.

This is indicated in the testimony of both J. P. Morgan and his right hand—at least in this investigation—partner, George Whitney. Morgan has testified that banking is by far the greatest part of their business.

This will mean the breaking of the Morgan ties with the New York Stock Exchange—ties that have blood as well as financial substance. Richard Whitney, president of the Stock Exchange, is the brother of the Morgan partner, George Whitney.

Richard Whitney is on the Morgan list of "preferred" security buyers, as was his predecessor, E. H. H. Simmons.

In addition, Richard Whitney is revealed as borrower from the Morgan firm and, in testimony at an earlier investigation, his own house was disclosed as one of the principal Morgan brokerage houses—that is, firms through which the Morgans do security business.

Another point that Ferdinand Pecora, the Senate committee's counsel, is endeavoring to bring out is, that directors of corporations with investment banking affiliations get stock market information way ahead of the shareholders.

If this point is proved, even half way, legislation barring partners of investment houses from sitting on boards of industrial corporations may be proposed.

The straw has been pointing to a segregation of banking investment business and industry.

LOSSES CLAUSE IN TAX LAW TO BE CHANGED

Carrying Over From One Year to Another to Be Stricken Out

Washington, May 26 (AP)—An amendment to the administration's public works industrial control measure to limit deductions from capital losses to one year in making out income tax returns was approved today by the House ways and means committee.

The proposal, an outgrowth of testimony before the Senate banking committee that J. P. Morgan had paid no income tax in this country in the last two years, was approved as the House neared a vote on the huge measure. A final roll call was expected before adjournment.

Meanwhile, the committee disclosed it was studying the testimony of J. P. Morgan and his associates in the investigation being conducted by the Senate banking committee.

As explained by experts of the committee the amendment will prevent the carry over of net losses from one year to another in arriving at a base for the payment of taxes.

Rep. Bacharach (R., N. J.) meanwhile announced that his motion to send the bill back to the ways and means committee for the substitution of a sales tax instead of the committee's program for boosting income and gasoline taxes, would provide for a two and three-fourths per cent levy on general manufacturers' sales, exempting food, clothing and medicines.

Indications were that the vote on the sales tax issue would be close.

Fire Menaces Village 6 Buildings Burned

Port Morien, N. S., May 26 (AP)—Fire that swept through seven waterfront buildings, menacing the entire village, was extinguished last night. Aided by an offshore wind, Glace Bay firemen and volunteer bucket brigades confined the property damage to $10,000.

MORATORIUM ON MORTGAGES IS 'UNTHINKABLE'

Bankers Told Chaos Would Result From Such a Move

Philip A. Benson, president of the Dime Savings Bank, Brooklyn, N. Y., today was elected president of the National Association of Savings Banks, in convention in the New Ocean House, Swampscott. He succeeds Wilson G. Wing of Providence.

A general moratorium for mortgage loans would be "unthinkable," Willard W. Miller, Bloomfield (N. J.) bank president, told the association.

He said chaos would result from such a move, in the opinion of the association's special committee on mortgage investments.

Miller urged the bankers to take an active part in agitation for real estate tax relief.

"The critical period of the recent past," he said, "has shown beyond doubt that the small American home constitutes a sound investment either for an individual or an institution. . . . The close association of mutual savings banks with home financing is one of the special reasons for their stability.

"Reduction of the rate of interest on the mortgage loan is a matter of consideration of each individual case . . . Opposition to a wholesale reduction of interest rates on mortgages would seem to be well founded."

Philip A. Benson, president of the Dime Savings Bank, Brooklyn, N. Y., expressed confidence in the mortgage as a savings bank asset.

"Our attitude at present toward owners of mortgaged real estate should be characterized by forbearance and tact," he said, "and I am sure that if any kind of institution has taken this attitude, it has been the mutual savings bank.

" . . . One thing, however, that we cannot waive or overlook—we must see that owners do not collect rents and pocket them to our disadvantage as mortgagees."

Pecora Strikes Heart in New Golden List

By EDWIN C. HILL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washinngton, May 26 (INS)—Revealing this afternoon that he had still other lists of "close friends" of the House of Morgan—gentlemen of place and influence who stood gratefully under the spout of Morgan generosity—Counsel Pecora of the Senate banking and currency committee struck hard at the methods of the Morgan firm in organizing great utility and industrial corporations in the fat years before the earthquake hit Wall Street.

Like the gentle rain of heaven, Morgan's benevolence dripped upon the heads of the chosen ones—and the more influential they were in the political, financial and industrial life of the country the stronger flowed the Morgan fountain of gold. For now it appears that a large group of "close friends" and potential reciprocaters were "in on the good thing" when the House of Morgan cut two other juicy and luscious promotion melons—the United Corporation and Hudson & Niagara Power.

GREEDILY TAKE TIPS

No butchers, bakers and candlestick makers appear in these new lists, but there are names written there of some of the most prominent men in America—prominent, but not too prond to take a cash tip from the over-man of Wall Street.

But the investigation angle that Prober Pecora established in today's short session, preliminary to taking a recess until next Wednesday, was the imperial methods of the House of Morgan in launching the United Corp. and dealing out its securities to an avid public.

According to Pecora, the House of Morgan stood to make $76,000,000 alone on the mere financial setup, organization and securities distribution of United—certainly one of the prize melons of Wall Street in all history. Only the financial smash prevented the cutting of this great melon.

STRIKES MORGAN HEART

The principal witness of the day called by Pecora was George H. Howard, president of the United Corp. This concern was organized in September, 1929, under the laws of Delaware—a Morgan baby straight from the great Morgan corporation incubator. Obviously, Pecora's object, he stated, was to extract from Howard the essential points of the Morgan technique in setting up some mergers of utility companies, in blowing up the value of their securities, and then unloading these securities upon the stock exchange.

It was instantly recognized, as Pecora ripped away at the Morgan connection with the United Corp., that the committee counsel was striking at the very heart of the power of the House of Morgan.

The outcome of the inquisition regarding Morgan and the United is expected to set up the evidence that Pecora wants and is determined to get—that a private bank must not accept deposits and then play the investment game with blue chips.

The first week's inquiry into the operations of J. P. Morgan & Co., over a period of eight years, ended early in the afternoon, when the committee, exhausted by the midsummer heat that bakes Washington, took an adjournment until May 31.

PECORA TAMES SOLONS.

Before it ended Pecora laid the groundwork of what will be his main attack against Morgan when the hearing is resumed next week—that J. P. Morgan & Co. had the magical faculty of waving a wand and making at lest two shares of stock bloom where only one had flowered before, and that the public paid for this magic. It is also apparent that the first week's assault on the Morgan stronghold was merely preliminary to the grand attack which will be made next week when Pecora begins to assail the stupendous character of the corporation promotions and mergers launched by J. P. Morgan & Co., in the boom days.

Apparently Pecora has tamed the members of the committee who seemed disposed to exercise discretion as to making public certain delicate facts and sets of circumstances connected with the dealings and contacts of the House of Morgan.

He has threatened to resign if he is not given a free hand. After what has been disclosed it is hardly conceivable that his resignation would be permitted.

As the week's hearing ends Mr. Morgan maintains the calm front and easy cordiality which has characterized him through all the hot and trying days.

One Refused to Join Chosen Few

Washington, May 26 (AP)—Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the committee investigating the Morgan banking house, said today he had the name of "one man" who turned down an offer to get on Morgan's select customer list for an "ethical reason."

He said he would later make it public with the man's letter refusing participation in a stock issue.

3 ABSOLVED IN MEDFORD LOANS

Three directors of the closed Medford Trust Co. are relieved of responsibility in certain loans by the bank in a supplementary report today by Charles W. Blood who sat as master in Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy's suit.

The suit was against Edwin T. McKnight, former president, and 23 other officers and directors of the bank.

In the supplementary report, John E. Volpe of Medford, a director is found not to have been negligent in approving three loans, totaling $51,000, to the Riverway Realty Trust.

Reversing his original finding, Master Blood pointed out that Volpe had been on the board only a short time when the loans were approved and was not in a position to realize that he should exercise his personal judgment.

John Coulson, Jr., is relieved of responsibility in approving a second mortgage loan to Lillian Siegel when a first mortgage loan of $110,000 was overdue. Coulson was absent from meetings when the loan was considered.

James T. Dennison is found not to have been negligent in approving loans to the Tragia Theater property in Leominster, because he was not a member of the investment committee when the last loan was made.

Chas. E. Harphan, Engineer, Is Dead

Charles E. Harphan, 69, for 45 years a designing engineer for the General Electric Co., and inventor of many improvements in street lighting systems, died suddenly from a heart attack today at his home, 265 Boston st., Lynn. He had been retired from business for three years. His wife and one son survive him. Funeral services will be held at the home Monday at 2 p. m.

Autoist Gashed by Glass in Crash

Michael Seelzo, of Ashburton st., Woburn, was injured today when his automobile crashed into a truck at Franklin and Congress sts. Louis DeDullo, of Lancaster st., Quincy, operator of the truck, was unhurt. Seelzo was cut by glass when the impact threw his machine against a street sign.

Slashes Wrist in Hotel

A man registered at a Common st. hotel as M. Thurman, of Hanover st., was found unconscious in his room today with his left wrist slashed by a jackknife found beside him.

JUST A WORD FROM A SENATOR

During an interlude in the hearing, Senator Hamilton F. Kean of New Jersey has a word with J. P. Morgan. The late New Jersey Senator Dwight Morrow once was a Morgan partner.

"WELL, WHAT DO YOU THINK?"

Morgan in serious discussion with his attorney, John W. Davis. The Sphinx of Wall Street seems more concerned than on the first day of the hearing.

FIRST PARTNER TO TAKE STAND

George Whitney was the first of the Morgan partners to follow the Head of the House to the witness stand. He told of "big men" who "came in on the ground floor."

MRS. HARTMAN COMES BY AIR TO AID 'NINI'

Owner of a Free and Easy Flat Will Refute 'Major' Story

Newport, R. I., May 26 (AP)—Mrs. Ethel Hartman of Birmingham, Ala., for whose appearance as a witness the trial of the Jelke divorce case in Newport County superior court has been held up, arrived by plane from New Orleans today and was whisked by automobile to the court house to take the stand.

The hearing was held up this forenoon pending the arrival of Mrs. Hartman, owner of the Birmingham apartment house where where witnesses have testified seeing Mrs. Eugenia Woodward ("Nini") Jelke with a man known only as "the Major."

It is understood Mrs. Hartman's testimony will be used to refute testimony of Mrs. Effie Wagner Bailey of Birmingham, who claims to have seen Mrs. Jelke and "the Major" in the Hartman apartment in January, 1931. That episode is being used by Jelke as a basis for a charge of misconduct against his wife.

Noted in the court room today was Marie Kraemer, attached to a detective agency in New York City, who previously testified to having traced Mrs. Jelke to a 53rd st. apartment house there.

Judge Charles A. Walsh, presiding at the hearing, said today he would not hold court tomorrow, as he has business in Providence. If the case is finished by Monday noon he will remain in Newport and hand down his decision in a written rescript before the end of the day, but if the case goes over into the afternoon he will not give his decision until Wednesday, when he will file it in Providence.

Postoffice Labor Trouble Renewed

Efforts to settle the dispute between members of conflicting unions at the new federal building failed again today, and 150 of the workers remained away from their posts. The only men at work are about 100 members of the carpenter, electrician and trowel trades. The dispute is over which union shall have the calking job.

'INDIANS'LL LIVE LONGER'

JOHN ("BUCK") YANKUS JAMES DEMPSEY

Well, those dusky redskins are not going to bite the dust as "Buck" Jones' " unerring aim lays 'em low—not just yet, anyway. The antelope and wolves and bears get a longer lease on life. John Yankus, alias "Buck Jones," 11, and James Dempsey, both of River st., Hyde Park, have deferred their journey into the wide, wild, open spaces where men are fearless and coyotes are cowardly.

LURE OF WILD WEST ENDS AT THE RIVER

Two Boys Get That Far, Then Decide Life at Sea Is the Life

The conquest of the West being a bit difficult this year, Johnny (Call Me Buck) Yankus, who is 11, and Jimmie Dempsey, who is 9, decided to lay it on the table today and remain home in Hyde Park.

Johnny and Jimmie were cured of their Western longing in just three hours, and the farthest west they got in that time was the Charles river, when their sparse capital went by the board.

"So long everybody," read a note which Johnnie left at his home in River st. yesterday afternoon. "I'm off for the West, the land of my heart. My name is Buck Jones now. Tell ma and pa not to worry about us—me and Jimmie. Give my love to everybody."

Johnny and Jimmie, who lives next door, then set out to hike to the West. They thought they'd ride a bit first, however, and they spent 20 cents of their total capital of 25 cents to ride to the Charles River.

With their air-rifle and a knapsack they started to hike, but almost immediately discovered they had lost the other nickel. That was a severe blow and they stopped on the river bank for a pow-wow.

A lad in a canoe attracted their attention and they went riding with him for a while and decided they'd rather be sailors than to conquer the Middle West.

After the ride they went up to a man and asked him what two "kids" should do who were far from home and who had abandoned their intention to go West.

"I think they should go right back home," said this man, and he placed them on a home-bound car and paid their fares.

MORGAN BARED AS UTILITIES KING IN $30,000,000 SWEEP

PECORA SCORES 'DUMMY' SHIELD OF DEALINGS

at $5,560,644.63. Morgan also turned over $700,801 in cash. Then the United Corp. issued 600,000 shares of $3 cumulative preferred stock, 800,000 shares of common stock, and 714,200 optional warrants to Morgan's firm.

Morgan moved his seat as the committee got under way an hour and five minutes late.

George Whitney, one of his partners, had expected to continue on the stand but Howard was called. As Howard came to the stand, "J. P." took a chair directly behind and close to the witness.

Howard said he became president of the United Corp. Feb. 26, 1929, and president of the New York United Corp., "in the fall of 1929."

He is a small, neat looking man in blue with a stiff collar and blue tie. He appeared nervous, speaking a little jerkily, and constantly dampening dry lips.

As Howard testified, Morgan moved up alongside Chairman Fletcher. He kept chatting with the Florida Senator even while the Chair issued rulings, admitting evidence of the House of Morgan's financial deals in utility stocks.

"J. P." smiled frequently. He appeared as interested in the proceedings as any of the audience.

Stock Not Worth Paper It Is On

Howard said that United was originally authorized to issue 13,000,000 shares of capital stock, divided into 1,000,000 shares of first preferred, 2,000,000 shares of $3 preference stock and 10,000,000 shares of common. This authorization, however, was never fully taken advantage of.

During the discussion over the market value of the stock, Senator Glass (D.) of Virginia interrupted once.

"The stock wasn't worth the paper it was written on, was it?" he inquired.

"It turned out that way,' said Howard.

The technical details of the organization were brought out by record to show how Morgan organized the huge utility corporation.

"Morgan had control of this corporation through its 800,000 shares of common stock, without even exercising its 714,200 optional warrants?" Pecora asked.

"Yes, sir," said Howard.

Morgan smoked steadily through the interrogation of Howard. At one point the financier noticed that Fletcher's cigar was dead. He handed the chairman a fresh cigar and then pulled out a packet of safety matches. Fletcher lit his own cigar and thanked Morgan. They seemed like two old cronies.

Pecora tried to bring out that the United Corp. was a "dummy."

"Where do you transact business?"

"We hold our meetings of directors in Newark, N. J."

"Who stays in the office there?"

"A secretary."

Morgan Holds Books of "Dummy" Firm

"Then all your business is transacted by a secretary in Newark," observed Senator Couzens (R) Michigan.

Howard protested that numerous conferences of directors were held in J. P. Morgan's offices.

He added that all "books of record" were kept in J. P. Morgan's office.

"Do you personally know, as president of this corporation, who makes the entries in the books or account?"

"I do nt."

The excessive heat—it was much hotter than at any previous session—slowed the empo of the hearing today. Handkerchiefs were constantly out. Everyone looked a little tired. The clock, which by committee decision, will give the signal for a four-day rest at 1 p. m., was the focal point of many a glance.

Howard admitted there was only a secretary and "an office boy" in the corporation's Newark office. The whole executive staff of the corporation appeared to consist of himself a vice-president, the secretary and the office boy.

Howard denied that the United Corp. "controlled" it subsidiary utilities.

"We Haven't Legal Control"—Howard

"I believe we have a very great influence with these companies—but not control," he said.

Pecora discussed with him the meaning of the word "control."

"I mean legal control," said Howard.

It owned 62,730 shares of Mohawk-Hudson, 988,271 of Public Service of New Jersey, 6,066,223 shares of United Gas. It had holdings, too, in Columbia Gas, Columbia Oil and Gas, Niagara Hudson Power, Commonwealth and Southern, Consolidated as of New York, Electric Bond and Share Co., Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co., American Waterworks, the Baltimore Consolidated as, and several others.

In December, 1932, the cost 'of these holdings was fixed at $592,821,864. In three years it had grown from a $56,0000,000 corporation.

Pecora introduced a colored map of the United Corporation set-up and Howard couldn't identify it. He looked at it blankly and silently handed it to George Whitney.

"I never saw it before," the tall Whitney said.

It was then shown to all the partners but Morgan, but none knew anything about it.

They had quite a time with the map, and no one could either identify it or deny that it was a true picture of the United eSt-up. Senators passed it around, looking interestingly at its bright colors.

Morgan Revealed as Utilities "King"

Pecora next showed the interlocking directorates between the United Corp. and the various companies in which it owned stock. Two Morgan partners—George Whitney and Harold Stanley—are directors of the United Corp.

John E. Zimmerman, president of the United Gas Improvement Co. (Philadelphia), a director in United Corp., was shown to be a director in a dozen other utilities. Pecora drew this information from Howard.

The purpose of this phase of the inquiry was to show that Morgan, long regarded as only a great banker, has become in reality the "Utility King of America" and that his control and holdings in utilities—through his great banking firm—ran into hundreds of millions of dollars.

Howard then listed his own utility directorships. He served on a half-dozen utility boards.

Howard then drew a deep chuckle which developed into a guffaw, from "U. P." when he mentioned "Brooks Bros." among his utility directorships.

"Just name the utility companies," Pecora said, echoing Morgan's laughter. "Brooks Bros. is a clothing concern."

Pecora asked Howard how much cash the corporation received in January, 1929. Howard testified it was $20,700,801.10.

He said $700,801.10 came along with the stock in other utility companies received from Morgan. The $20,000,000 came from sale of stock.

Half came from Morgan and half from Bonbright Electric Co., each getting 400,000 shares of common stock and 1,000,000 option warrants, each warrant entitling the owner to buy an additional share of common at $27.50.

Pecora then tok up the 714,000 optional warrants given Morgan's firm by the United Corporation. Howard said the warrants gave the holders the right to buy United common stock at $27.50 a share.

"Now suppose the market value of the common stock went to $50 a share, anyone holding these warrants could demand issuance of stock at $27.50 ashare," said Pecora. "Was that of any advantage to the corporation?"

Morgan Partners' Debts Kept Secret

After a pause, Howard said: "Well, suppose at that rate, the assets behind the shares was $27½, it would depend entirely on the market value of the stock."

Pecora seemed puzzled by the reply as were others.

"You wouldn't expect any one to exercise his option at 27½ if the stock sold on the open market for less?"

"No, sir."

The committee earlier decided to withhold from publication the list of debts owed by the twenty Morgan partners to the firm.

The decision was reached in an executive session, but no agreement was reached on the question of publishing the partnership articles under which the great banking house operates.

A list of individuals having more than $1000,000 on deposit with the Morgan firm will be made available to committee members and the question of publication decided later.

Another big crowd was on hand. Extraordinary precautions once more were taken to handle the spectators in the expansive, marble room and bar suspicious characters. Even the usual police guard for Senate inquiries was augmented.

Ferdinand Pecora, the committee counsel, was on hand ready to go ahead searchingly into operations of the massive banking house.

To date, only Morgan and George Whitney of the 20 partners have been heard from. There have been reports of much to be ascertained from others of the well known partnership, members of which meet daily except Saturday and Sunday but keep no minutes of the sessions.

One plainclothes man of the local police was assigned directly to the task of following and guarding J. P. Morgan, senior partner, and another was assigned to Pecora.

The Morgan party arrived in the hearing room shortly after the committee went into executive session.

Morgan was dressed in a different suit for the fourth consecutive day, this one being gray of much lighter hue than the previous ones.

Foe of Wall St. Watches Hearing

Members of Pecora's staff dragged in a trunkful of papers.

Junius S. Morgan, son of Morgan, soon took a seat by his father, both in laughing humor.

The elder commented to those

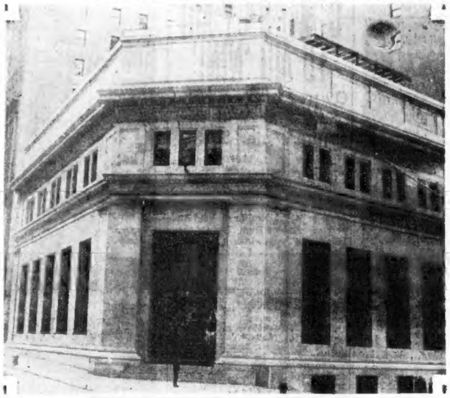
Pecora Will Trace Alleghany Stock

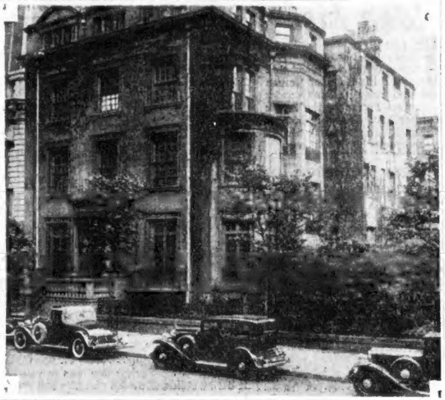
Washington, May 26 (INS)—Distribution of 500,000 shares of Alleghany stock by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York will be investigated by the Senate banking and currency committee when it completes its inquiry into the practices of private bankers and turns to commercial bankers.

Ferdinand Pecora, the committee's special counsel, said today he intends to trace the 500,000 shares of this favorite stock given this bank to distribute. No date was set for the hearing.

The Houses of Morgan -:- His Bank -:- And His Town Home



THE COUNTING HOUSE, BROAD AND WALL STREETS



THE MADISON AVE. TOWN HOUSE—UNDER GUARD

Architecture tells the story of Morgan! There is nothing "flashy" about the houses of Morgan. Unobtrusive and unassuming, they give an impression of dignity and power—mirroring their master's character. The bank at Broad and Wall streets is not unlike the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street"—the Bank of England—perhaps its only rival for dominance of world finance. It is opposite the Subtreasury, near the Stock Exchange—dominated only in height by its Wall Street neighbors. A bomb left almost at its door in September, 1920, killed 30 people, but did little damage to its almost inaccessible offices. The town house on Madison ave. at 37th st. contains the famous Morgan library, including the original manuscript of Dickens' "Christmas Carol." Like the bank, it is always under guard. Morgan also maintains homes on Long Island and in London's Grosvenor Square, and his palatial $6,000,000 yacht, the Corsair.

More Morgan 'Favor Lists' to Be Bared

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Universal Service Correspondent.

Washington, May 26—Remarkable sagacity of J. P. Morgan & Co. in spreading their gratuitous beneficence among the politically mighty of the land again startled the Senate banking and currency committee in its continued search for an explanation of the unprecedented power wielded by this great private banking firm.

The investigation has disclosed:

1—Calvin Coolidge was included on a newly-revealed "favor list" of the Morgan bank. The late President was allotted 3000 shares of standard brand stock at the Morgan-cost price of $32 a share. The stock opened at $40 7-8. This transaction occurred after Coolidge left the White House in 1929.

John K. Raskob

2—John J. Raskob, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee, accepting the Morgan offer to suscribe at rock-bottom for 2,000 shares of Allegheny Corporation common stock, expressed "the sincere hope the future holds an opportunity for me to reciprocate."

3—The Morgan co-partnership agreement, which the partners have insistently denied is of "public interest," must be produced for the committee's decision, whetrer or not to make it public.

George Whitney Mrs. Gilbert

Mrs. S. Parker Gilbert, wife of one of the Morgan partners, whose name appears on the Morgan favored-customer list, and George Whitney, one of the partners who admitted in the Senate inquiry that he made vast profits in stock deals.

4—George Whitney, a leading Morgan partner, declared the firm endorses the securities bill now before President Roosevelt for his signature.

The investigation will swing next into the Morgan promotion of the United Corporation, in which another "preferred list" will be disclosed.

Equally as amazing as the Morgan gratuities to the powerful was the banking firm's foresight in selecting for acts of unusual "friendship" potentially influential men.

Thus, the wife of S. Parker Gilbert was granted the privilege of subscribing for a block of Alleghany Corporation stock in the original offering early in 1929. At that time Gilbert was agent-general for reparations, a powerful position from which he later resigned to become a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co.

The Morgan partners vigorously resented any suggestion their friendship for the Gilberts had any relationship to his influential power in world finance.

Another recipient of 1929 Morgan favor was a partner of Dean Acheson, Washington attorney, who just last week was confirmed for the Under-Secretary of the Treasury. His appointment was vigorously opposed in the Senate by Senator Couzens, a member of the committee which yesterday listened intently to revelation of Morgan favors.

Many of the politically and financially great who were disclosed as having been privileged to participate with the Morgan firm in the Allegheny offering were disclosed as "repeaters" in the Standard Brands opportunity.

OTHER DEALS

It was also plainly intimated that many of these prominent figures will also be revealed as participants in other Morgan deals yet to be disclosed by Ferdinand Pecora, the committee's counsel.

A crowd which jammed the caucus room of the Senate office building sat amazed as name by name Pecora established their financial affiliation with the Morgan firm.

The crowd proved too large for the banking committee's room, and the hearing was transferred to the caucus room, largest in the building, but this also proved too small, and many would-be spectators were turned away.

MILLIONS IN PROFITS GIVEN MORGAN IN UTILITIES

nearby on the oppressive heat of the day and the place.

Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), who frequently in the Senate denounces international bankers and Wall Street, stood in the doorway and looked at the Morgan group for a few moments.

The committee had difficulty in attempting quick argreement, the senators still arguing some 25 minutes after the accustomed starting of the public hearing.

With newspapers and straw hats being used by many spectators in futile attempts to cool their brows at the hearing scene, Morgan adjusted his dark blue tie and pearl stickpin as members of the senatorial committee entered the room.

Chairman Fletcher said the committee failed to reach the question of making public the closely guarded partnership agreements.

Drive on to Oust Woodin and Davis

Upon the committee's decision to go over until next Wednesday, at the end of today's session, the Morgan party said it would return to New York during that period.

The committee will meet later to decide whether to publish the partnership agreement.

Testimony of Morgan witnesses has shown that several members of the firm are indebted to it.

A congressional demand for the resignation of William H. Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury, roared across Capitol Hill as word spread he would be named as a "favored client" of the Morgans on five different lists of "cut-rate" securities.

The Senate banking inquiry already has revealed Woodin as one of the Morgan "friends" given an opportunity to buy Allegheny Corp. and Standard Brand stocks at special prices below the market values before he was in the Cabinet.

Agents of the Senate banking and currency committee have proof that he also bought three other stock issues, handled by the House of Morgan, at similar preferred prices.

The drive to oust Woodin was non-partisan. It was led by Senator Borah (R), of Idaho, and Senator Wheeler (D), of Montana. Wheeler was an eloquent supporter of President Roosevelt in the 1932 campaign. Both senators—as did many other independent leaders in both parties—declared Woodin's usefulness was ended by the revelation of the favors extended him by the House of Morgan.

Three more lists of "favored clients" of Morgan will be made public today. These deal with the sale of stocks in General Motors, the United Corporation and the Johns-Manville Corporation. Fresh sensations were expected as the committee reveals the names of more prominent persons, given cut-rate prices by the great Morgan firm.

Morgan's Retinue Goes to New York

Washington, May 26 (AP)—J. P Morgan and the group that accompanied him to Washington intend to return to New York tonight to remain until Tuesday night or Wednesday morning, when the hearings, adjourning tonight, are to be resumed for a quick finish.

Just Another Inquiry

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The bug testifies in Washington that his only preferred list is to starboard.

He could testify that in any other city, town or hamlet. Since Postmaster Farley is so anxious for an overwhelming repeal vote, we would like to know if his organization will comfort the staggering, pension the remorseful and decorate the boys on the front-line mahogany?

Will the letter carriers be detailed to deliver us at our proper homes? How much postage per erring pound will be required on wayward husbands?

Will the parcel post handle exuberant lodge members and see that the bodies arrive at their mailing addresses?

Shall we write our names plainly on our cuffs? How many stamps shall we use? And where shall we paste them? On our chests or on our backs?

The witness can now step down. We hope that nobody looks through the bartender's guide and discovers we were a favored customer.

Ex-Mule Driver Head of Church

Columbus, May 26 (AP)—Dr John McDowell of New York city, who rose from the position of a mule driver in Pennsylvania coal mines to the high councils of his church, was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. by an overwhelming vote.

'PRINCE' CRUEL, WAILS HEIRESS

Bridgeport, Ct., May 26—The poor young law clerk whom Fredericka Fry, Cinderella heiress to the $5,000,000 Timken fortune, plucked from his immigrant father's print shop to be her Prince Charming, not only beat her unmercifully but refused to take her out in public because he was ashamed of her appearance, she charged today.

The roller bearing heiress, who became Mrs. Eligio Del Guercio in a spectacular $300,000 wedding at Greenwich only two years ago, filled page after page recounting Eligio's cruelties today in support of her suit to divorce him.

"All through my married life my husband refused to take me to any entertainment and stated that my personal appearance made him ashamed to be seen with me in public," the wife, now 23, plump, and the mother of a two-year-old son, Eligio, Jr., related.

Lomasney Gets Out to Work in Garden

Martin Lomasney, political czar of Ward 3, came out into the wide-open spaces today and spent his time "puttering around" in the garden of his brother's home on Audubon rd., Back Bay. Lomasney is expected back at his rolltop desk in the Hendrick Club, Green st., West End, some time next week.

BEER PERMITS IN STATE GAIN

Governor Ely today signed the bill materially increasing the number of licenses which may be granted in cities for the sale of bottled beer not to be drunk on the premises. The number in Boston alone will be increased from 176 to 501.

A large crowd of prospective beer-sellers awaited the signing of the measure with a rush to licensing boards throughout the state indicated.

Brookline, with its large population, is the only town to benefit under the act.

POLICE TRIAL IN SICK ROOM

Slowick was also called to tell about medicine Waldron was taking. After their appearance, the trial continued, the board apparently being satisfied Waldron was mentally aleart.

It was learned that prior to the switch to the hospital, Cohen's attorney asked delay because he had not had time to prepare the defense, but this was refused

Waldron's lawyer also brought out that the patient's leg was broken and re-set Wednesday and that four cans of ether were used and opiates administered later. He argued he was in physical pain and unfit for mental strain.

Meanwhile the nurse in charge of the accident ward was forced to leave her duties to get out records of Waldron's treatment. Police witnesses stood against the wall of the ward in which were 25 or more patients.

OFFICIALS CROWD ROOM

In the private room, behind a closed door, were Leo Schwartz, legal adviser to the police commissioner; Supt. Crowley, Stenographer William Shanahan, Deputy Supt. Martin H. King, the trial board of Captains Livingston, Mullen and Gleavy, and Waldron and Cohen and two lawyers.

All was in confusion in that wing of the hospital, as well as in the executive offices, where one official after another was sent for to appear before the police board.

At headquarters Commr. Hultman was asked why it was desired to hold the trial before Waldron was able to leave the hospital, replied:

"I told the board to try the case. I have nothing to do about the methods they use in doing so."

LAWYER PROTESTS RUSH

Attorney Glaser said:

"I never heard of any proceeding like this. I've had no chance to summon witnesses, confer with my client, Patrolman Waldron, or study the police rules under which this trial board functions. A copy of the rules was given me only this morning.

"I have appealed to Commr. Hultman for a delay before today, and this morning I argued before the board without result. For some mysterious reason the board moved to the hospital to examine my client in his present condition. The only reason I can discover for this haste is that Commr. Hultman ordered the hearing to go ahead."

The first police witness was Patrolman Albert McArdle, who discovered the tire store break and discovered evidence leading to the arrests. Capt. Skillings acted as prosecutor.

MORGAN FAVORS AMAZE EVEN WALL ST.

By BROADAN WALL

New York, May 26 (US) — The "favors" passed out by J. P. Morgan & Co. to many influential citizens, some of them very prominent politically, in the form of Morgan-sponsored securities at prices far below their immediate marketable worth, has caused even mercenary, hard-boiled Wall Street to gasp.

COVETED "HONOR"

For years it has been a coveted "honor" among investment firms, financial institutions and other dealers in securities to be "on the Morgan list."

What did and does this mean?

Morgan & Co. have distributed this century more billions of new securities than any other banking house in the world.

The modus operandi is this:

Morgan & Company agree, say, to buy from a leading railway or industrial or utility company 25 millions or 50 millions or 100 millions of new securities at a stipulated price.

Then the firm notifies banks, investment firms, security dealers, and—as it is now disclosed—many influential individuals that they have been alloted a certain amount of the issue at an "inside" or rock-bottom price, well below the figure at which the securities will be sold to the public.

Usually, elaborate arrangements are made, before a new security appears on the stock exchange for public trading, to insure that the first dealings will be at a price substantially higher than that named by Morgan's to its favored clients.

ETHICS VIOLATED

As has been revealed, the difference between the price fixed by Morgan for Allegheny Corporation shares and the price then current in the open market was approximately 75 per cent.

Such gentlemen as John J. Raskob, Newton D. Baker, William G. McAdoo, Charles Francis Adams, Charles D. Hilles, Norman H. Davis, E. Edmund Machold, C. N. Bliss, Joseph R. Nutt, all prominent in Republican politics, to say nothing of the present Secretary of the Treasury, William H. Woodin, R. B. Mellon, brother of ex-Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, and a veritable "who's who" in finance, industry, railroading, utilities, mining, shipping, etc., were allotted hundreds of thousands of these and other Morgan shares could immediately pocket an enormous profit.

Incidentall, it is not in strict accordance with Wall Street ethics for favored individuals, under such circumstances, immediately to dump their alloted stock on the market, because, obviously, were many of them to do this, the market price would tumble headlong.

BAKER TAKES LOSS

Newton D. Baker, ex-Secretary of War and prominently mentioned last year as a possible presidential candidate, declares that he didn't sell out, and has actually sustained a loss, since Allegheny corporation stock has sold this year as low as 87½ cents a share, and has not, even during the recent boom, sold above $2.50 a share.

It has always been considered entirely ethical, of course, for those professionally engaged in any branch of the security business to participate in Morgan or other underwritings. They are in the position of wholesalers or retailers buying goods from manufacturers, for the express purpose of reselling at a profit, exactly as in any other line of business.

But private individuals, particularly those exercising great political influence, are in a starkly different category.

They naturally put themselves under obligation to their benefactors.

In effect, they have money put in their pockets which they have not done anything—at least directly—to earn.

They are recipients of largesse, to use a polite word.

Always the soucce, the secret, the explanation of J. P. Morgan & Co.'s unparalleled influence, unparalleled power, unparalleled domination has been a popular mystery. By digging into the very vitals of the heretofore secret Morgan records, the Senate Finance Committee's resourceful, persistent, irresistible investigator, Ferdinand Pecora, has finally uncovered what the public will interpret as the key to the mystery, the solution of the long-baffling problem.

Old Bosses Grill Morgan Partner

Washington, May 26 (AP)—One of J. P. Morgan's partners is facing two of his old bosses at the Senate investigation of his firm.

Russell Cornell Leffingwell was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury during Woodrow Wilson's administration. William Gibbs McAdoo and Carter Glass in turn headed the Treasury. Both now in the Senate, they sit among the inquisitors.

AMERICAN HEAD OF REBELS

Havana, May 26 (AP)—An American who fought for Cuban independence from Spain before the Spanish-American War was identified as a leader in the present rebellion against President Machado.

He is Col. Charles Muecke, more than 60 years old and blind in one eye, hard-bitten campaigner of guerilla warfare days.

A dispatch from Camaguey yesterday said six rebels who surrendered there to federal forces asserted they were members of fighting outfits jointly commanded by Col. Muecke and Ismael Sanchez, a Cuban. The command is operating around Cubanacan, Camaguay Province.

Other reports reaching here today aid Santa Clara delegates of the radical revolutionary party were attempting to persuade rebels in that province to return to their homes.

Various factions of the opposition to the regime of President Machado continued discussion of a proposed truce on terrorism.

BOLT TO SALES TAX IN MORGAN DISCLOSURES

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Correspondent

Washington, May 26 (INS)—If a thoroughly aroused Congress overthrows its leadership and enacts a sales tax instead of piling more income taxes on the little fellow—as it may do—J. P. Morgan will be the cause of it all.

This became apparent today as the rippling tides of revolt spread all over Capitol Hill against the new bill framed by the Democratic leadership of the House.

How real this revolt is, and how fearful many members are over the effects of the bill on their political lives was demonstrated by the fact that 82 Democrats deserted their leaders on the first test and joined with the solid Republican minority against swallowing the increased income tax proposals without change. The harassed Democratic leadership barely squeezed through with a margin of 19, despite their majority in the House of 200-odd.

MORGAN DODGING AIDS

The sensational revelation that Morgan and his 19 multi-millionaire partners paid no income taxes at all in 1931 and 1932, and between them only $48,000 in 1930, has made more friends for the sales tax overnight than anything else could have.

Members of Congress are frankly fearful of voting to raise the normal income tax rates from 4 to 6 per cent, and from 8 to 10 per cent, and then going home and trying to explain to their constituents why they failed to "get Morgan."

Said one Democratic rebel, and his complaint was voiced by many:

> "How am I going to explain to the middle class people of my district why I voted to increase their income taxes to wartime levels at a time like this—when the rich are paying no income taxes?
>
> "I can picture being asked in my next campaign: 'Instead of spending your time in Washington increasing taxes on our small incomes, why didn't you spend your time devising some means of compelling the Morgans and the Mitchells and the Whitneys and the Lamonts to pay at least some income taxes?'
>
> "How are you going to answer that?"

TO DAM LOOPHOLES

One thing the Morgan disclosures has made virtually certain. That is that the capital net gains and loss provision under the present revenue act will be thoroughly revised before Congress goes home. This was the loophole through which the Morgan partners escaped.

The tax measure, as framed by the little coterie of Democrats in the House, who represent, for the most part, rural constituencies, is not likely to be enacted in its present form. Despite the "gag rule" in the House, through which the leadership can jam almost anything through, the revolt is so widespread there as to menace its chances.

And behind the House lies the Senate, which is deemed certain to rip the House bill to pieces.

There are many sincere opponents of the sales tax in both chambers who are now disposed to switch—not so much because they have changed their minds basically about the sales tax as because they believe it affords the only quick method of getting the required revenue, and compelling the ultra-rich to bear a proportionate share of the federal tax burden.

Cuban Policeman Bombed

Cienfuegos, Cuba, May 26 (AP)—A bomb exploded shortly after midnight at the dor of the residence of Police Captain Lino Lomo. The sidewalk and porch were damaged.

Brains vs. Talent Is Problem for Hollywood

By Gilbert Seldes

Gilbert Seldes

By this time I should know better, but I still get angry at misfires in the movies, and when the misfire is of a particularly big gun I fall into "a feet of rage," as a French friend of mine used to say. My last experience involved no less a light than William Faulkner, whose name you hear mentioned in the same breath with Hemingway, Dostoievsky, and, I think, Shakespeare in his better moments. What the movies did to Faulkner and what Faulkner did to the movies are equally terrible, and my first impulse was to wire the big businessmen in Hollywood to get rid of all their intellectuals before the intellectuals ruined them. But, taking time to think that little was probably left of Hollywood to be ruined, I had the fortune to see a second Faulkner work which is a little better—the one called "The Story of Temple Drake." The name of the first one was so like the names of 50 other movies that I have already forgotten it, but I know it had "tonight" and "love" in it. You can work it out for yourself.

Lots of Fog

Starting with a good, simple story of an aviator and a naval commander in the war, each bent on showing the other what the war was really like, Mr. Faulkner progressed, in Hollywood, to one of the most senseless and one of the most complicated love stories it has been my pleasure to listen to. To make the story easier to understand, nine-tenths of it was filmed in fog and rain, and half of the dialogue which explained the action was spoken over the roar of airplane propellers or the crowd noises of a French saloon.

What is more, Mr. Faulkner was known as the new baby of the sophisticated, so he was allowed to sling together a hash of phrases which meant nothing (a) to the audience, (b) to the characters and (c) to Mr. Faulkner. They were all English (except good, old Gary Cooper, who remained loyal) and proved it by never saying anything costing them more than two words. "Home," they said. "Glad." And several times "Stout fella," which I heard last—at least I had hoped so—in Beau Geste. To make the illusion of England in 1916 complete Miss Joan Crawford had on several of the least attractive examples of 1933 American clothes.

Solid and Subtle

Now "Sanctuary" is supposed to be an exceptionally intricate and subtle novel, dealing with characters you had best call queer and may call depraved. The same central characters occur in the Temple Drake movie, sufficiently twisted to escape identification. It is 100 degrees more solid and more subtle than the usual movie, if you take it all by itself and do not compare it with the novel, which took hundreds of pages (some of them very confused) to tell a parallel story. I wouldn't call it a great movie; but its touch of morbidity and some of Faulkner's integrity make it a distinguished one.

So, perhaps, the movies had better hold on to their intellectuals and artists, provided they no not forget that the best things in the movies do not come from outside—from novels and plays — but from the movies themselves. Fifteen years ago the best things were the Keystone comedies, rising to their height in Charlie Chaplin; today they are the Mickey Mouse type of comedy rising to its height in the colored Silly Symphonies.

Noah's Ark

I recommend to those who remain skeptical a picture called "Noah's Ark." By accident or by genius Disney has chosen a series of colors which remind you of nothing so much as old magic lantern slides and frosted Christmas cards. With that to start on, he has drawn more beautifully comic pictures than ever, and has developed his ideas to the farthest point. The picture calls for shrieks of laughter and a silent tribute of admiration from moment to moment.

People Can Make Congress Vote Sales Tax, Says Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Famous Author and Diplomat and Former Ambassador to Italy

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, May 26—If the people want a sales tax instead of higher income taxes to support public works for employment this is the time for them to write their congressmen and senators and say so.

The real truth revealed by a survey at the Capitol today is that a majority of both houses can be mobilized behind the general manufacturers' sales tax if our representatives who let fear rather than sense and service rule their votes can be relieved of their superstition that the "forgotten man" prefers income taxes because "he does not have to pay them."

TAXPAYER IN THE END

The "forgotten man" is not as stupid as these legislators believe.

He knows that in the rent he pays and all that he consumes he is the ultimate taxpayer of most of the income taxes.

He knows that so far as the rich are concerned that they escape income taxes—hiding their capital in tax exempt securities, getting skilled advice from income tax experts who know how to slip through the government's fingers—mostly by legal means and sometimes by illegal means. He knows that capital seeking escape in these ways gives the least possible aid to our recovery, to new jobs, to the forgotten man's pocket and his real welfare.

He knows that taxing industry and creative effort, as such, chokes industry and stifles creative effort.

He, the forgotten man, knows that it is better to tax what is consumed than what is created.

He, the forgotten man, knows that it is better to tax spending than savings.

ACT IMMEDIATELY

And he should tell all this to his senators and congressmen on the back of a signed postal card in a sentence: "Sales tax; not more income tax, please!"

This will relieve some of the timid legislators who fear that a sales tax will lose them votes.

Must be done at once—today.

What stands in the way of the sales tax—which skims off revenue painlessly instead of shocking it out of us—is not scientific reasons, not taxation theories, not sincerity in House and Senate, but plain unadulterated and wholly baseless fear. Some congressmen still believe the forgotten man labors under the delusion the income tax reaches all the rich and saves for the poor.

Recent revelations have cured that idea to an extensive degree, even among those who had it before.

The fear of some congressmen is that the forgotten man may fail to see that income taxes cause capital to hide and help to keep factory gates closed. But the forgotten man is no such fool. The way to open factory gates is to get capital out in the open and remove from it the burden of the annual slashes of the income tax. A premium rather than a parasite on creativeness, whether corporate or individual, would be more in order.

225 MILLIONS NEEDED

To make special industries or activities bear a discriminatory sales tax is unfair and fails to raise the amount needed. The forgotten man knows that, too.

He knows that we need about $225,000,000 a year to carry the fund for public works and provide new employment and get job-money into circulation.

The forgotten man knows that higher income taxes as a policy may result not in larger income for the government, but because in the end they paralyze activity, result in less income to tax and thus less, not more, payments to the Treasury.

In the last few years of distress the forgotten man and the unemployed man have become better economists and taxation-theory experts than they were. For instance, every one of the young men who are helping Roosevelt collect material for his policies receive every day in the mail, endless suggestions, many thought out with care and skill from let us say teamsters and longshoremen who have joined the professors.

These are the forgotten men who realize that higher income taxes may fail in their yield because they blight endeavor.

NOT A PARTY QUESTION

The survey on capitol hill today reveals that our representatives are now aware of this fact of a new englightenment.

It is time for the forgotten man to act. He has no other way to make himself felt this week end. While there is still a chance to register his opinion he can write to his representatives that a general sales tax will yield the surest support for public works and yet sap the least from the impulse we now feel to get going again.

Or one word from the President would settle it.

It is not a party question.

'L' ON SUMMER TIME JUNE 3

Edward Dana, general manager of the Boston Elevated, announced today that summer schedules on certain branches of the system would go into effect on June 3 and on other branches later in the month.

He explained that minor curtailments in service occur owing to a falling off of patronage in summer months of approximately 30 per cent. Instead of discharging employes or even laying them off temporarily, the vacation schedule is adjusted to meet the slack in business.

Mr. Dana denied a report in circulation today that the reduced schedules were part of a general economy plan to save an additional $2,000,000 in operating expense, based on the recent card survey in which patrons co-operated.

Romance of Hollywood Today

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

AT HIS DOOR he selected the key from one of several on a small silver ring. It was the usual procedure for the Filipino to hear the turning of the lock and be at the door to take Cavanaugh's hat and coat immediately. Tonight, however, the boy was not there.

Cavanaugh put up his own things without attaching any great importance to it. He wondered idly what had become of the boy. Perhaps he had fallen asleep in a kitchen chair and would appear in a moment smiling and apologetic.

Then, suddenly, Cavanaugh stopped dead still in his tracks. His nostrils widened slightly and he breathed in a flower-smelling trace of perfume. His face darkened as he moved with a quick step into his wide living room with its high walls and beamed ceiling.

The woman who had been sitting in a tapestry chair sprang up and stood directly in front of him.

"I thought maybe you'd come home—sooner or later," she said with a half smile, and menace in her voice.

Cavanaugh's eyes hardened.

FACE FLUSHED

Throught half closed lids he studied this darkly handsome woman with the scarlet mouth and sullen eyes. Her hair was black and lusterless like wrought-iron and drawn back smoothly from the Latin creaminess of her cheeks.

"How did you get in here?"

"Quite easily. Your Filipino let me in. I told him I was expected and that he could come back tomorrow."

It was not going to be easy, Cavanaugh began to realize, to deal with Annette.

He had tried everything—kindliness, humor, neglect. It was not a question of money because she had plenty of that, or love either. She had lovers and husbands scattered from Rio de Janeiro to Montreal.

"Exactly what is it you want?" he demanded.

"You!"

There was little he could say without feeling like an idiot. He had met her at the president's ball in Mexico City and she was, in a technical sense, a lady.

"I'm afraid I've gone out of circulation," said Cavanaugh. "You flatter me, Annette, but—"

He stopped with a shrug.

Her face was beginning to flush.

"Do you know what you have done to me?" she cried, but he cut her short.

"Don't be silly! I haven't done anything to you."

"You have set my whole life on fire!" she threw at him, her voice rising. 'Am I a plaything to be cast aside for another woman. This movie star you're running after like a—like a——"

"Cut that out!" commanded Cavanaugh.

The color had left Annette's face and she was begining t be livid.

"So! I am not allowed even to mention her!" she cried, louder than before. "This woman who comes betwee us! You stand there brazenly and tell me to my face that I have o rights! Because she is a movie star she is better than I am! She's been in your arms onight! Don't deny it. You don't dare deny it!"

The louder she talked, the lower became Cavanaugh's voice.

"If you realize what a fool you're making of yourself, you'd quiet down," he said. "You're a vain, jealous woman and, if I may add, a very noisy one. You'll probably have a new romance next week and forget that I ever existed."

Annette lowered her vice and spoke through her teeth. She called him an epithet in Spanish that made is face blance.

* * *

GUN IN HAND

Poletski shifted his position on the fire escape and tried to get Cavanaugh in a straight line with the muzzle of his automatic. The trouble was that the woman kept getting in the way.

Sometimes the figures were blurred. He could hear their voices in a babble of argument, but he was so concentrated upon his own purpose that he had no interest whatever in their words.

The automatic was treasured carefully in one of his hamp palms.

There was no hurry at all. Poletzki was quite content to wait. He was filled with the subtle joy of a hunter waiting for his prey to get into position.

Poletzki knew how to send a straight bullet. He knew he could not miss.

Annette had begun to gesticulate. Her face, contorted with passion, had lost all beauty. Her eyes glistened metallically. The scarlet mouth kept twisting. Human reasoning had toppled from its throne. That hell-fury of a woman scorned consumed all restraint.

Cavanaugh tried in vain to silence her. It was hopeless. He sat down and lit a cigarette.

"If you keep it up you'll make yourself deathly sick," he said helplessly.

Her voice, which had been almost a scream, dropped to a dry cold level, as deadly vibrant as the flat sound of a rattler.

Despite his self-control, Cavanaugh's blood began to chill. The woman had lashed herself to the verge of insanity. Looking at her no • it was incredible that he had ever found her colorful and charming, a careless sparkling companion as pleasant as Burgundy wine. The very air around her seemed to palpitate with greenish radiations of hate.

With Cavanaugh faced by a half-crazed woman and stalked by an armed gangster, the installment tomorrow will prove one of the most exciting so far. Don't miss it.

2 CASEYS DOOM BREAK SUSPECT

Too many Caseys in the life of Jack E. Perry of Washington st., Jamaica Plain, spelled trouble for him today.

On May 4, according to police, Perry broke into the home of James E. Casey, Moss Hill rd., in the Jamaica Pond district, and stole jewelry.

And today he appeared before Casey's brother, Judge Daniel Casey, in West Roxbury court where he was held in $25,000 for the grand jury after pleading not guilty and waiving lower court hearing.

Police said he broke into six places in the pond section within a month and tried to break into two others. Mrs. Frederick Young of 52 Woodland rd., caused his arrest after an alleged attempt to break into her home.

SOCONY
Mobilgas

HIGHEST ANTI-KNOCK AT THE REGULAR PRICE WITH

CLIMATIC CONTROL

TOMORROW a new motor fuel goes on sale in New York and New England; new and better in test and performance.

A NEW NAME—Socony Mobilgas, quality mate to Mobiloil, the first-choice motor oil among motorists here—and the world over.

A NEW IDEA—Socony Mobilgas has the exclusive feature of Climatic Control, a scientific improvement, originated by Socony-Vacuum, which prevents loss of power and mileage with weather changes.

A NEW ANTI-KNOCK VALUE—Through a new process, Socony Mobilgas with Climatic Control offers you the highest anti-knock quality you have ever been able to get at the regular price.

WHAT IS CLIMATIC CONTROL?

All gasoline is extremely sensitive to weather changes. Your own experience undoubtedly has shown you how engine performance varies with driving conditions. Every daily variation in the weather from hot to cold, from rain to shine, raises or lowers engine heat, and engine heat is the factor which turns liquid gasoline into gasoline vapor and into effective horsepower.

Climatic Control—originated by Socony Vacuum—is the pre-adjustment of the specifications of Socony Mobilgas so that, at either high or low altitude, it automatically adapts itself to the daily—even hourly—weather changes, thus preventing loss of power and mileage.

Climatic Control, therefore, is what you must have in a gasoline to make you independent of weather changes that affect ordinary gasolines. And only Socony Mobilgas has Climatic Control!

Climatic Control has been proved in the laboratory. It has been tested under a variety of outdoor conditions far more severe than you'll ever encounter. It has met with outstanding satisfaction in the cars of hundreds of thousands of motorists in test areas of widely varied climatic and road conditions. You can depend upon it.

TRY IT TOMORROW

Fill your tank with the brand-new Socony Mobilgas tomorrow. Thrill to its higher anti-knock performance. Feel the difference in power, regardless of weather changes. Check the mileage economy. And, remember that you get this new and better gasoline, plus the exclusive feature of Climatic Control, at no increase in price. Buy it once and you will buy it again.

GUM-FREE — The new Socony Mobilgas is gum-free. You avoid the annoyance and expense resulting from gum-sticking valves and other parts.

SWEATSHOP WAR BACKED IN N. BEDFORD

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

The Common Council of the New Bedford City Council last night unanimously passed City Councillor Ernest Perry Ponte's resolution denouncing sweatshops and placing the City Council on record supporting the campaign of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser to drive them from New Bedford and from the state.

AID DORGAN'S FIGHT

The resolve based on the investigation of these two papers that sweatshop conditions and low wages existed in New Bedford was brought by the Ward 1 councilman in an effort to arouse public-spirited New Bedford citizens to join in a state-wide campaign to rid Massachusetts of its [illegible] sweatshops.

Councillor Ponte's resolution was as follows:

"Whereas, the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser have undertaken an investigation of working and sanitary conditions in sweatshops in the state, and,

"Whereas, this investigation has disclosed deplorable conditions, and,

"Whereas, New Bedford has been pointed out to have a number of these sweatshops operating under these conditions, affecting unfavorably the morale of the people employed there, and tending to demoralize industry, and,

"Whereas, we always have and always will help to promote our working people's best interests in every way possible,

"Be it resolved that we join His Excellency, Governor Joseph Ely, Mayor William White of Lawrence, Mayor Mahoney of Worcester and other groups of fair-minded citizens in their denunciations of these sweat shops as a menace to any community, and pledge our hearty support to the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser in their campaign to rid the state of sweatshops,

"Be it further resolved that our representatives at the General Court be instructed to join Rep. Thomas Dorgan of Dorchester, in his proposed legislation to end the abuses and exploitation of workers in sweatshops, and raise the standard factory work to the level of American decency."

CLEANUP UNDER WAY

The order unanimously passed by the Common Council is preliminary to a city-wide [illegible] and clean-up of low wage and working conditions in the city.

New Bedford is one of several communities throughout the state that has taken its cue from the findings of these two papers and the impartial investigation of civic organizations to institute progressive proceedings against minimum wage and labor law offenders.

Some girls are working in New Bedford factories on a piece work rate that nets them weekly incomes of only $3 and $4. For the most part these workers are young girls.

For a $3.25 standing pay, girls are working in underwear and pajamas factories, their nimble fingers turning out hundreds of dozens of garments. Yet with all their speed, the rate given these workers is so low they cannot eke out a living wage.

For $3.25 a week the New Bedford Manufacturing Co. [illegible] the use of skilled textile workers to make their products.

RICH WITH $8 PAY

Likewise in industrial centers throughout the state experienced workers are being paid low wages. Should they by chance reach a weekly income of about $7 or $8, though this is far below the minimum wage regulated for their craft, the girls consider their weekly earnings "good pay."

So the comparison has been set that girls pride themselves on being "rich like a queen" when they reach the niggardly sum of $7 or $8.

Take these stories selected at random from the hundreds of industrial histories given by working girls in Greater Boston. They tell a story of struggle for existence on a standard that belies the American idea of a living wage and decency.

CASE NO. 1

"When I finished the eighth grade I went to Trade School and took a dressmaking course. Then I worked in a man's clothing factory until I was laid off in 1931.

"Since December, 1931, I have been working for a company which makes cotton dresses selling for $1.00 retail. Most of the dresses are section work, and the rates differ for various styles. For the easiest we get 20 cents a dozen on waists, 30 cents a dozen for skirts, 8 cents a dozen for side seams, and 6 cents a dozen for trimmings. Last year we got 75 cents for waists and skirts, and they weren't so fussy. We have to do better, quicker work all the time, and the rates are cut a few cents almost every week.

POWER TURNED OFF

"For making a complete dress with a set-in pocket and a ruffle on the collar, we get 90 cents a dozen, although they sell for $1.50 apiece, retail. During the Christmas rush we made bathrobes for $1.84 a dozen. They sold for $24.00 a dozen wholesale, and $3.95 apiece retail.

"The power is turned off for an hour at noon, but we girls save our belts and collars and work on them then, so we don't have to waste time doing hand work when the power is on. If there isn't any work, we have to sit there for nothing. We're not allowed to go out, because some work might come along, and we'd be needed. The workroom is stuffy and dirty.

"I have worked about eight months out of 12. I've been out only two full weeks, and the rest of the time I've worked part of the week. The work here is steadier than in some places of which I've heard.

"Before Christmas we worked overtime, sometimes as late as 7 o'clock. I'm a fast worker, and I usually can make about $12.00 a week. It's not much of a place to work, but my family needs the money too much to take the chance of my looking for another job."

CASE NO. 2

"After I graduated from grammar school I went to the Trade School for a year and studied power machine operating and dressmaking.

"I worked for six years in a men's clothing factory, a union shop. When there was work I could earn $21 or $22 a week as a button machine operator. But much of the time there wasn't enough work to keep us busy all day, and sometimes I stayed all day for 10 cents to hold my job. In the busy season we had to work overtime until 6 or 7 in the evening, and they fixed our time cards so it wouldn't show.

"I was laid off last August, and have worked in many places since. For three weeks last September I worked in a dress shop on Kneeland st. I got 25 cents for making a woolen dress with 4 pleats in the skirt, 56 tucks, 8 bound button holes and fancy lined sleeves. Such dresses sold for $11.95. I earned $3.00 a week for three weeks, and then quit.

"I was out of work four months, and then got a call from another company which said it could use me stitching men's trousers. I'm new to the work, and only made $5.60 the first week, but I'll be able to earn more when I've had some experience."

Another story on sweatshop conditions will be published in the Boston Evening American tomorrow

N. H. STRIKERS VOTE ON TERMS

Manchester, N. H., May 26.—Details of their strike victory were outlined by union leaders today to 7500 operatives of the Amoskeag Mills who will vote tomorrow on acceptance or rejection of the terms.

Return to work by Wednesday, with a wage increase of 15 per cent and assurance that no discrimination will be shown against the strikers were the terms offered the strikers through the intervention of Bishop John B. Peterson.

Balloting on their acceptance will be in charge of the Textile Council of Manchester tomorrow at the regular city polling booths in City Hall between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Labor leaders, Bishop Peterson, and officials of city and state strongly urged the strikers to accept the 15 per cent increase, in spite of the fact that it does not nearly represent the reductions of 20 to 40 per cent that were taken by employers in February. Many of the workers want full restoration of the February cuts.

JAPAN IS READY TO ABANDON NAVY PACT

Geneva, May 26 (INS). Japan today formally announced her desire to abrogate the 5-5-3 naval ratio, expiring in 1936, whereby she was given that relationship with regard to the American and British fleets.

Naotake Sato, Japanese chief delegate, appearing before the general committee of the disarmament conference, renewed his insistence voiced yesterday that any new disarmament agreement should not bind the signatories to the Washington or London naval treaties.

He plainly indicated that Japan views the 5-5-3 arrangement whereby British and American fleets are put on parity with Japan as a "second rate naval power," as unsatisfactory.

Japan, he [illegible], the committee believe that any general disarmament agreement [illegible] here must necessarily terminate both the London and Washington naval accords.

Sato told the conference:

"It will be both practical and equitable to make no mention in future conventions of provisions relating to tonnages previously allotted to the powers concerned."

Davis Steering U. S. in League Back Door, Says Ex-Sen. Reed

By JAMES A. REED
Former United States Senator From Missouri
(Written for Universal Service)

Kansas City, Mo., May 26. I have to say that I am unable to give any other construction to Mr. Davis' Geneva pronouncements except that if these declarations are carried out they necessarily involve us in a back door membership of the League of Nations and are bound to commit us to the decisions of that body.

It is idle to claim that a nation can sit in consultation with other powers and not be bound by the decision of the conference.

Morally we would certainly be bound.

It is absurd to say that nations can sit in conference and any good result come unless the conference reaches an agreement. It is equally absurd to say that an agreement having been reached that the parties to it have incurred no obligation.

The American people have several times expressed their wishes to the effect that we should keep clear of the League of Nations and entanglements with foreign powers.

They have declared very emphatically that it is their desire we should pursue a policy of strict neutrality in all controversies in which we are not directly concerned.

The history of the past 12 years has emphatically demonstrated the wisdom of the policy of neutrality. Even our experience in plunging into international banking operations has brought the disastrous result of unloading upon our people billions of dollars.

It is high time to return to the policies of Washington. If the present administration should undertake to reverse those policies the effect will be disastrous to the country and, in my opinion, will result in the overthrow of the party at the next election.

However, the question is not political. It is national. I think the American people should arouse themselves to the menace inherent in Mr. Davis' declarations.

Gandhi, Fast Near End, in Good Shape

Poona, India, May 26 (INS)—With but 72 more hours of his 21-day fast against untouchability yet to be passed, Mahatma Gandhi was pronounced "extraordinarily well" by his doctors today while his friends and followers waited impatiently for the ordeal to end. Following his usual morning prayers, he had several hours of sleep.

POLA IS BARRED AT WEDDING

By JOHN KOBLER
Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.

Paris, May 25—Barbara Hutton, America's second wealthiest heiress, today consented to talk for the first time—just a wee bit—about her romance and the plans for her marriage to Prince Alexis Mdivani here on June 20.

Explaining that the "Mdivani family does not approve of the marriage of its sons to actresses," Miss Hutton revealed that Pola Negri, movie star now in Paris, will not be a guest at the wedding. Pola was the former wife of Prince Serge Mdivani, now husband of Mary McCormick, Chicago opera singer.

In an exclusive interview, Miss Hutton, daughter of multimillionaire Franklyn L. Hutton of New York and heiress to the vast Woolworth fortune, cried:

"I'm wildly, madly excited. I don't know whether I'm coming or going.

"You know, I've known Prince Mdivani since I was 15, but for the last three months—I've been in love."

Asked her plans for the wedding Miss Hutton replied:

"We're going to be married in the Russian Church, and have our honeymoon at Lake Como. Afterwards, we're going to Venice and Biarritz and then to America. We're making plans to live in New York.

REGRETS U. S. ATTITUDE

London, May 26 (INS)—Expressing "regret" over the position of America toward European security, Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, defended the British disarmament plan as a bold move for world peace in a debate on foreign affairs in the House of Commons today.

Sir John lauded the British draft convention as a bold and most effective plan for ensuring speedy disarmament.

He welcomed "helpful declarations" from the United States, France, Italy and Germany, but said he regretted the United States was "momentarily unable to deal with Part I of the convention dealing with security."

Stressing the American attitude toward the security problem, Sir John continued:

"This in some ways is a little unfortunate, because I am profoundly convinced that until we can satisfy certain great states that we have got inside our scheme something insuring security we shall never persuade them to agree to a form of effective disarmament."

Col. Hewes Named Woodin's Assistant

Washington, May 26 (AP). Col. Thomas Hewes of Farmington, Ct., a member of the staff of Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, was nominated by President Roosevelt as assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of fiscal offices. The nomination was referred to the Senate judiciary committee.

Col. Hewes was named to succeed James H. Douglas, who was appointed under the Republican administration.

"I don't want any publicity about this. I'm all right. It's my business what I did," was all Mrs. Nellie Dyczheski would say to reporters today as she was arraigned for the hammer and torch slaying of her three children. She covered part of her face with a handkerchief as the camera clicked. Police said she displayed neither emotion nor realization of the tragedy.

"I must have said something that upset him," she said.

She was granted a divorce after further testimony that her husband, William, of Quincy, lived with her only two days at the time of their marriage, for three days about four months later, and let it go at that.

Mrs. Mildred F. Brooks, Hudson, was [illegible] uncontested divorce after testifying that Philip Brooks [illegible] her and went away with another woman.

Mrs. [illegible] Everett obtained a divorce from Arthur N. Ke[illegible] who she said tried to choke her.

C[illegible] and a charge by Federal Judge Ira Lloyd Letts [illegible] obtained before the case could go to the jury.

ARMS CUT SEEN SMALL BY U. S.

Washington, May 26 (INS)—American officials today abandoned virtually all hope of any drastic disarmament being achieved at the Geneva disarmament conference before the world economic conference meets in London little more than two weeks hence.

Although reluctant to concede their pessimism, officials admitted the hopes for some real accomplishment in Geneva on disarmament in advance of the economic conference were dwindling rapidly in the face of Japanese and French obstacles.

Japan's demand for virtual naval parity with Great Britain and the United States, France's objection to the Mussolini four power pact, her refusal to agree to naval parity with Italy and Germany's demand to build a new capital ship all threw cold water on the hopes held here a few weeks ago that some concrete results might be achieved before economic disarmament was sought in London.

Officials declared this government will remain unalterably opposed to Japan's demand for an increase in its naval ratio.

NAZIS CLASH ON REICH BISHOP

Berlin, May 26 (AP). The Nazis today rejected Rev. Friedrich von Bodelschwingh, noted social director who had been nominated as the first evangelical bishop of the Reich. They insisted on Rev. Ludwig Mueller, chosen by the German Christians (Nazi) group.

The nomination of Dr. von Bodelschwingh by Hermann Kapler, president of the German Protestant Church Unions, and his associates, drew a hot rejoinder from the Nazi German Christians, headed by Dr. Joachim Hossenfelder.

A press communique declared:

"The German Christians demand that Mueller be made the Reich's bishop because they love their church . . . because Mueller is the shepherd who knows how to talk to simple German folk, and because he knows how God-given faith removes mountains."

RIDDELL DEATH TRIAL IS NEAR HANDS OF JURY

Illness of a juror today, for the second time since Monday, temporarily halted the trial in Dedham court of John T. Daley, Quincy youth, for the Halloween night murder of Harry "Pop" Riddell, 68-year-old Atlantic baker.

Henry C. Blenis of Weymouth was the second juror stricken with an intestinal disorder. He was attended by Dr. Fred E. Jones, who on Wednesday prescribed whiskey for another suffering juror. After a 45-minute delay Dr. Jones said Blenis was not all right, but could go on and trial resumed.

There was good prospect of the case reaching the jury tonight. The defendant, resuming the stand as the last defense witness, was taken under cross-examination by Asst. Dist. Atty. Sullivan.

Daley admitted he had told conflicting stories but said he did it to shield John A. Bowen, who has confessed the actual attack on Riddell and who will plead guilty to second degree murder and receive a life sentence.

He admitted he "had a feeling against Bowen now.

"He got me in something that ain't right," Daly said.

If found guilty of first degree murder, he will be sentenced to the electric chair although Bowen, the actual killer, escapes.

5 COAST GUARD GO TO TIE UP

In the gray dawn today, four [illegible] ft. coast guard patrol boats pulled away from Base 5, East Boston, and steamed down the harbor bound for Baltimore, where they will be stripped of all their trimmings and tied up one to another out of commission, their flags hauled down and their decks deserted, save for a watchman.

With their going Base 5 goes out of commission as far as any active service is concerned.

A skeleton crew will be preserved and the machine and repair shops will be used for five 125-footers of the offshore patrol that will dock there.

Base 5 patrol duties will be taken over by base 7 at Gloucester. Seven boats left yesterday for Baltimore, the port of decommissioned ships. Three patrol boats, seven picket boats and two planes remain to patrol the coast from Maine to Provincetown.

Third Edition Out of Priest's Book

The Dial Press of New York today announced the release of the third edition of "Voodoos and Obeahs" by Rev. Fr. Joseph J. Williams, S. J., member of the Boston College faculty.

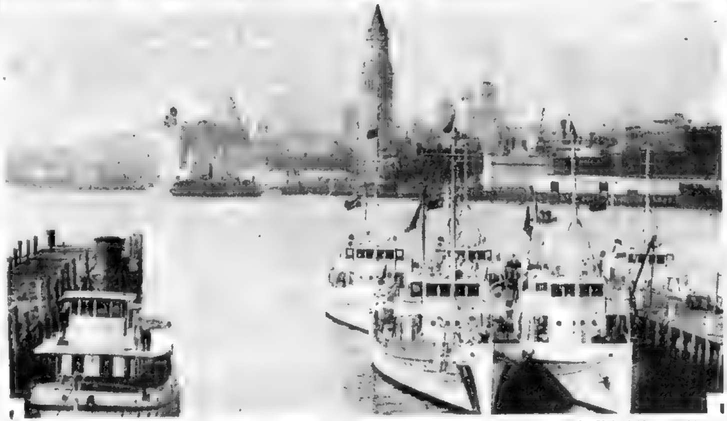
Fr. Williams

The first edition of this book appeared in the last week of December so that three editions are appearing within less than five months, an unusual achievement for non-fiction.

Coincident with this announcement comes the word that Allen and Unwin of London have just contracted for an English edition of the book.

Father Williams is a native of Boston, and is the author of several books about Jamaica, Haiti and the islands of the Caribbean. "Voodoos and Obeahs" is a scientific study of West India.

GOODBYE, RUM-CHASERS; HOWDY, BIGGER COAST GUARDS



Base 5, East Boston Coast Guard headquarters, passed out of commission today with the departure of the four 75-foot patrol boats for Baltimore, where they will be tied up. As they departed, the five 125-foot patrol boats arrived here for off-shore patrol duty. They are shown in their new berths. Note in the distance the Custom House tower, the United Shoe Machinery building, the Second National bank, the new postoffice and other structures. This coast area is now to be in Base 7's district (Gloucester). Many veteran coast guards pass out. (Boston American photo.)

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By Louis Sobol

A Few More Gents!

(And Even Some Ladies!)

Bert Lahr: An inveterate pessimist, convinced that the world holds little in store for us here below except plenty of trouble and headaches and heartaches. He's very rarely funny off-stage and I can't recall that he's ever told a gag. Now to my way of thinking he's one of our best comedians—and I don't mean in the slap-stick sense, although he's a master at that. But if you've ever gotten a load of him impersonating Clifton Webb, you'll appreciate the genuine sense of satiric values the fellow possesses. He's going great guns on the radio, they tell me—I haven't listened in so I can't say truthfully how good he is—but I know for months he kept lamenting that the radio was no field for him until several of his friends had to gang him and pour confidence into him.

Joseph V. Connolly: Head of the world's greatest syndicate, King Features. A boyish-faced fella, constantly bubbling over with enthusiasm, about beats scored by his organization. He's another of the bunch that came out of my home town, New Haven, and made good in the big city a . . though to be honest, I hadn't heard much about him except that a young fellow named Roger Connolly who had been appointed managing editor at an unheard of youthful age of the New Haven Register had a brother in New York who was doing well it was reported, with the Hearst people. Then I read a piece where it seems Joseph Connolly had been made head of King Features and a few auxiliary branches and then I began hearing a great deal about him. How he persuaded Calvin Coolidge to write the story of his life, how he shipped Floyd Gibbons to the Manchurian front and enabled Hearst people to score beat after beat in war news; how he hired foreign correspondents and fired them; how he arranged that continent-to-continent telephone conversation with Hitler. A thousand and one sensational newspaper feats have originated with and been consummated almost alone by this fellow and he should really be a very aged and tired looking and aloof person instead of the kind of chap who attends opening nights and laughs and jokes and even reads the various columns re syndicates, which is the height of indiscretion and bad taste for any chief of a huge syndicate and a huge news service, but it's the Connecticut naivete of the lad—and I'm all for it.

Gilda Gray: I don't give histories of these people whom I present to you in this occasional series. I merely want to convey my impressions of them. The gal who used to shimmy 'em went off the other day and married coffee planter in the diplomatic service, a fellow named Hector de Saa, for which in addition to my congratulations I can't forgive her for only last week when I met her in the Man About Town Club I said to her, "I think I know what you need. Why don't you get yourself a new romance, run off and get married or something?" She giggled and Greta Garboed back, "As tank as have go to Milwaukee." "Have you got a cousin there?" I inquired, quick like, and she said, "Boy, I've had enough of romance and of marriage. I'm strictly on my own from now on, take it from me. It's safer and saner. How do you like my face, lately?" So I said, "You'll never make a lady hermit," and she said, "Sez you!" and I said, "Sez I." Which is neither here nor there. "You don't think I have any depth or emotion, I bet," she murmured, and I murmured back, "You bet wrong. I think you're 90 per cent emotion and impulse," whereupon she reached into her bag and drew out an envelope and said, "I was going to send this to you. I wrote it for your column—the first poem I've ever written. I call it 'Broadway Merry-Go-Round' and I wish you'd print it—if you think it's good." So here's the poem, ladies and gents:

What a city, crammed with flesh
Iron steel and silken mesh
Cellar flats and penthouse perches
Jails and synagogues and churches,
City full of buses, going—
Trains and street cars overflowing
Truckmen, motormen and chauffeurs
Crooks and workingmen and loafers,
Swanky members of the fight clubs
Shop girls, show girls, girls from night clubs,
Actors, doctors and morticians,
Dancers, ministers, musicians
Dames in silks or cotton wrappers,
Babies, schoolgirls, lip sticked flappers
Lovers, haters, busboys, waiters
Schemers, dreamers, speculators;
Bums, Bohemians and free souls
Formal folk who dare not be souls
But must walk in closely pent aisles,
Greeks and Latins, Jews and Gentiles,
Gamblers, amblers, brisk go-getters,
Brokers, creditors and debtors
Snoot, classes, sweating masses,
Glaring as each other passes,
People swarm in herds and bunches,
Following their different hunches
Bevies, bands and mobs and crushes
Life that seethes and boils and rushes
Over walks and pavement gritty
Lacking heart and void of [illegible]

'TILLIE AND GUS' TO BE FILMED

Paramount Picks W. C. Fields and Alison Skipworth for Co-Starring Roles

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 26—Would you go to see a picture with the title "Tillie and Gus"? If you have a sense of humor and you want to laugh that combination of names would lure you into the movies instantly. W. C. Fields will make his debut under his new contract with Paramount as Gus, while the incomparable Alison Skipworth will toddle along as Bill's co-starring partner, Tillie. They will be a pair, won't they?

Louella O. Parsons

Bill Fields has been juggling in and out of the movies since 1925 when he made his first pictures for Paramount. He returned to free lance last year. Now he has agreed to make [illegible] pictures for the company each year. Oh yes, I nearly forgot to say 'Tillie and Gus' is by Nunnally Johnson and John McDermott and it will be directed by Norman McLeod.

Role For Lederer

PLENTY OF COMEDY IN SCREEN NOVELTY

Revolving Stage at 'Dinner at Eight'

"Dinner at Eight," kaleidoscopic, high-voltage play in 11 scenes by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, which has been an outstanding dramatic success of the current New York season, comes to the Shubert on Monday, May 29, for a two weeks engagement.

A cast of distinguished folks will present "Dinner at Eight" here. Constance Collier, last seen here in "Hay Fever," will play a glamorous but fading actress. Crane Wilbur will have the role of a passe moving picture actor. Others importantly concerned in the proceedings will be Ann Andrews, Judith Wood, Jane Wyatt, Charles Trowbridge, Margaret Dale, Paul Harvey, Ethel Intropodi, Austin Fairman, Samuel Levene and Mary Murray.

To facilitate a rapid change of scene a revolving stage will be installed at the Shubert next week.

Stage Who's Who

Morton Bowe

Morton Bowe, lyric dramatic tenor, who is to appear on the stage at Loew's State for one week beginning today, has been a star for two years on the air in Boston. He has been in Shubert operettas, the last of which [illegible] "White Lilacs," playing the part of Prince Obelinsky, and appeared in vaudeville in most of the large cities. He came to stage originally from the newspaper business. He was known as one of the fastest linotype operators in Boston. It [illegible] while working as a printer that he obtained his musical education.

'The Warrior's Husband' Packs Strong Satiric Theme; Old Favorites in Cast

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"The Warrior's Husband" turns out to be quite the year's top novelty out of Hollywood. With free and easy hand it applies slapstick to the classics; against a most unusual background of shield and spear it splashes the burlesque brush in hilarious fashion. Sometimes it is the ancient Greeks who are travestied, often it is the modern world, and always the laughs are hearty and rich. You may safely take a seat in either the Paramount or the Fenway and feel sure of a rare comedy treat.

* * *

Marjorie Rambeau

The movie opens up in such epic style you might anticipate a spectacle after the "Ben Hur" type. For minutes the screen takes on the glories of a silent panorama with music beautifully attuned to the march of the Amazons, whose scheme of things, made into satire of our own conventions, seem to be turning the globe topsy-turvy. Here the women rule, do the fighting, protect the men. Man's place is the home, one of the several ideas neatly turned to laughter by the picture's captions. Then an army of men's men appears, and the Amazonians bite the dust and learn that it's home, sweet home—for the women.

Glory be, then the dialogue does start, it proves to be the most sparkling kind. There is mirth of line, as well as of situation. You're apt to feel that the audience laughs too much—the noise loses a number of good laughs through the drowning out of fast-following quips. The basic idea is loaded with fun, and the way it has been worked out merits a great deal of praise, despite certain drawbacks.

The burlesque is in able hands. Marjorie Rambeau, once considered by many the foremost lady of our stage, is the queen of the women's realm and Ernest Truex is her effeminate spouse. The romance is furnished by Elissa Landi doing her best screen acting, and by David Manners. You will recognize other oldtimers among them Helen Ware, Maude Eburne, amusing with her trick helmet; Lionel Belmore, as Homer the poet, and Ferdinand Gottschalk. Helene Madison, the swimming champion checks in as a captain in the queen's guard.

It's too bad the satiric strain isn't upheld the whole way. When the film goes "straight" drama, it loses much; strictly burlesqued, it would have been among the best films of the year. But it is crammed with antics just the same, and can be prescribed to furnish rib-tickly entertainment.

* * *

The companion picture is "The Girl in 419," interesting, but all the same too much of a hodge podge as to story to be fully effective. It deals with doctors and nurses, with gangsters, and an underworld lass salvaged by a young medico. David Manners appears, enjoying thus the distinction of being in both feature pictures on this bill. James Dunn is out of his element, and Gloria Stuart is the sweetheart.

But, "The Warrior's Husband" is a picture worth seeing, one of the delights of the year among Hollywood comedies.

"Cavalcade" Comes to Uptown Tomorrow

Starting tomorrow, the Uptown will present a stellar program. "Cavalcade" is the feature picture. In the cast are Diana Wynyard, Clive Brooks, Ursula Jeans, Herbert Mundin, Una O'Connor and Edward Lawton. The co-feature is "Out All Night," featuring ZaSu Pitts and "Slim" Summerville. This unusual bill is rounded out with interesting short subjects.

Police and Fire Illness, Racket in Everett, Says Official

Charging that Everett firemen are "trying to rub it in and stick the city good and proper," City Solicitor Maurice T. Silverstein of Everett, has presented the finance committee of the City Council with figures showing that a fireman or a policeman makes more money being sick than he does when working.

In addition to getting full pay from the city while sick, no matter over how long a period, they are paid $12 per week from the relief funds of those organizations. In addition, the city pays the bills for medical or hospital aid.

The "firemen's racket" this year has flooded the city with claims for doctors' bills and other expenses, Mr Silverstein informed the council. The relief fund is raised out of the pockets of the business men and citizens in general. They feel they must contribute when solicited, he declares.

MITCHELL WINS POINT ON DEAL

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, May 26 (INS)—There were no memoranda or other records in the accounts of the late John D. Ryan, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., and W. D. Thornton, president of the Greene-Cananea Copper Co., to indicate that Charles E. Mitchell ever intended to repurchase the 8500 shares of Anaconda stock to be sold to Thornton.

This point, favorable to the defense, was brought out today at the trial of Mitchell for alleged income tax evasion, by Max D. Steuer, counsel for the former head of the National City Bank.

The government charges that the sale and repurchase of the stock by Mitchell from Thornton was a deliberate fictitious transaction made with the intent to defraud the government by claiming a loss of $758,000

The defense claims the transaction was bona fide and that Mitchell was about to sell the stock on the open market when Ryan, a friend of Mitchel, asked him to sell it to Thornton so that the price would not be depressed.

The 8500 shares, at the time of the sale on Dec. 26, 1930, were held as part of the collateral by J. P. Morgan & Co. for a $6,000,000 loan to Mitchell.

In the Mitchell-Thornton deal, Ryan put up 2500 shares of Anaconda as collateral in the complicated transaction.

With Walter Adams, accountant for the ledgers of both Ryan and Thornton, on the witness stand, Steuer asked:

"Did you ever see or hear of any memo or other record by which Mitchell planned to undertake the repurchase of the 8500 shares of Anaconda bought by Thornton?"

"Oh, no," replied Adams.

The repurchase of the stock which the defense maintains was unpremeditated and for investment reasons, was made in May 1931 five months after its sale.

Death Takes Child Spurred by Rooster

Hood River, Oregon, May 26 (AP)—Attacked by a large, prize rooster, Carol Kreig, 18 months old died in a hospital from pneumonia which set in after she had suffered concussion of the brain.

The child's skull was stabbed by the rooster's spur

Mark Grave of Bern's Ex-Wife

Sacramento, Cal., May 26 (AP)—A simple granite stone bearing the inscription "Dorothy Millette Bern, 1886-1932," today marked a grave in East Lawn Cemetery

Dorothy Millette's body was found last September in a slough of the Sacramento river about a week after Paul Bern, motion picture executive and husband of Jean Harlow, motion picture actress, killed himself in his Los Angeles County home. At that time it was reported Miss Millette had at one time been the wife of Bern

The marker was paid for by money received from the auction of Miss Millette's clothing.

Brockton Pastor Dead

Brockton, May 26—Funeral arrangements will be completed today for the Rv. Thomas F. Brannan, pastor of St. Edward's Church here for more than 20 years.

TWO ARE HELD IN THEFT CASES

Gustave Clough, 24, of Newhall st., and Daniel R. Gallagher, 26, of Collins st., both of Lynn, were each sentenced to two years in the House of Correction today when found guilty in Quincy Court on a charge of larceny of two slot machines from the Veterans of Foreign Wars headquarters in Commercial st., Weymouth, on May 15.

They appealed and were held in $5000 each for Superior Court.

Judge Kenneth Johnson declined jurisdiction on a charge of carrying burglars' tools and held them each in an additional $10,000 for the grand jury.

The pair were caught on the morning of May 15

33 Turks Drown

Istanbul, Turkey, May 26 (AP)—Thirty-three Turks drowned today when a ferryboat carrying 50 sank in the River Kilkit, near Tokat. Several persons were missing.

Bottomley, 'England's Ponzi,' Dies a Pauper at 73

London, May 26 (INS)—The story-book career of Horatio Bottomley, orator, publisher, financier and jailbird, came to an end in a charity hospital ward here today.

Virtually penniless and but a shadow of the colorful figure who for years wielded more power than any other Englishman in or out of politics, Bottomley succumbed to the after-effects of an abdominal operation at the age of 73

Since his release from prison after serving five years for fraud in the sale of Victory bonds during the war, Bottomley made ceaseless but ineffectual attempts to recapture the prestige and power he once knew.

His last "public appearance" was last month when he called at an unemployment relief station to request a pension of $2 a week. He was refused, and a few days later was stricken with the grave illness that resulted in his death

In his capacity as a financial wizard whose operations ran into the millions and as editor of "John Bull," one of the most outspoken of the British weekly publications that flourished during the war, Bottomley was credited with making and breaking governments as well as individuals.

It was frequently said of him that he "might have been prime minister," but in discussing his own downfall he said more than once

"I could have got anywhere, but I made a fool of myself"

STATE BOARD IN SECRET PARLEY

In an unexpected move to end the strike at the A. R. Hyde and Sons Shoe Co, East Cambridge, the state board of arbitration summoned the strikers' committee to discuss settlement terms, it was revealed today.

Led by William B. Mahan, general organizer, and a member of the National Shoe Workers' Association, the committee spent two hours before the board in a conference preliminary to a final meeting to be held soon.

Officials of the Hyde company will be asked to confer with the board, it was announced today, to present their terms of arbitration.

At its final conference both the strikers and factory officials will appear before the board.

Albert Sprague Coolidge, instructor in chemistry at Harvard College and one of the foremost figures in the strike movement, yesterday addressed the strikers in the Cambridge st, East Cambridge, headquarters.

A mass meeting of strikers is planned for this evening in the Cambridge st hall.

North China Truce Is Signed at Miyun

Shanghai, May 26 (AP)—Despite censorship and official denials due to fear of the consequences, there appeared no doubt today that a provisional Chinese-Japanese truce was signed at Miyun last night. The document was brief, providing only for the cessation of hostilities through fixing of a line to which Chinese forces are to withdraw, leaving details to be arranged at formal armistice negotiations to be begun shortly.

War Minister in Moscow

Moscow, May 26 (UP)—The Soviet government has officially denied reports from Harbin that Clementi Voroshiloff, minister of war, is in Khabarovsk or anywhere else in Siberia.

NEW WALKOUT AT HAVERHILL

Haverhill, May 26—Two thousand stitchers in 98 local shoe factories walked out today in a new strike caused by the alleged failure of employers to abide by agreements that ended the recent strike.

The walkout again threatened to tie up the industry here. The stitchers reported for work at the usual hour threatening to quit unless the shop owners came to terms and, at 11 o'clock, carried out their threat. They claim they have not been given their full pay under the new price scale ordered retroactive to March 27.

The controversy centers around wages granted them at the end of the March strike, which were understood by the workers as retroactive to March but by manufacturers as applying only to new work.

The stitchers claim that all other shoe operatives received a raise in wages on all work whether or not it was new or on orders that were in process during March.

Newton to Vote on Restraining Dogs

Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton today called a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen for tonight for action on an order to restrain dogs for 30 days, and also to appropriate $1000 to hold clinics for immunizing dogs against rabies. At present there are more than 3500 dogs in Newton, making one dog for every 20 residents.

CHEMICAL CO. FACES SUITS

New York, May 26 (AP)—Reports that some large minority holders of Allied Chemical Co stock were contemplating court action to compel the company to disclose its financial position in detail could not be confirmed today in quarters where many of the sizable holdings are said to be lodged.

These rumors followed the New York Stock Exchange's ultimatum Wednesday that the common and preferred stocks of the company would be removed from the trading list on August 23 if the company failed to comply with the exchange's demand for a more informative balance sheet.

THIS IS LIFE

New Blood Needed to Make Air Education Plan a Success

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

The radio is filling the air with the strong and disciplined voices of the Metropolitan Opera House chorus in the old Italian favorites, and I, appropriately enough, am reading the recommendations of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, as presented by its director, Dr. Levering Tyson. Such a broadcast rather cuts the ground from under the Council's contention that so much of radio is "blatant and nauseating commercialism," "blood and thunder thrillers" and "vulgar ballyhoo," that the high-brows must take a hand in the game. This kind of language is characteristic of reformers and the experienced pay little attention to it, but it really doesn't help matters much.

I was feeling rather happy about things artistic, as a matter of fact. Down in New York a judge has just rebuked Mr. John Sumner, chief snooper of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, by refusing to ban a popular novel which Mr. Sumner, standing almost alone, wanted banned. In Boston at the moment of writing it looks as if Mrs. Anna Coleman Ladd's lovely statue, "Wind and Spray," will continue to stand in the Public Gardens where thousands may see it, instead of being shut up in a stuffy museum. All seemed well, until the Council with the long name began troubling the waters with their usual complaint.

Catch in Plan Means New Radios

The fact that John D. Rockefeller is subsidizing the Council makes one a bit dubious. His success with Radio City and the Music Hall has not been alarming enough to make one entirely complacent about turning radio, as well, over to the Rockefeller interests. Presently there would have to be murals—say, of Ed Wynn or der Baron surrounded by red flags—and that wouldn't help.

There is one ray of hope in the fact that apparently the Council does not intend to take all the commercial programs off the air and fill the time with educational material. That is just as well. The idea seems to be to endow four or five short wave stations, which would specialize in educational and cultural programs of high quality.

There is a catch there, of course. Those of us who want high quality educational programs would have to buy new radios with short-wave attachments. I wonder if by any chance the Rockefeller Centre interests that are financing the Council have their eye on a nice short-wave set that only needs a little advertising to sell big. There's nothing obligatory about it, you understand. If you are satisfied with present programs, you can stick to your present set—that is, until the Brain Trust gets round to regulating radio for us, too.

As you might guess, the commercial program managers are not to have anything to do with the educational programs. If you think hard, you can probably guess who will be entrusted with the task of civilizing America over the ether. You might take a paper and pencil and jot down your list, and have it ready to compare with the official list. Ready? Well, here it is.

Walter Lippmann, of course, of course! No really adequate thinking is being done today without Walter Lippmann.

Norman Thomas, the white hope of the Socialists.

Dorothy Canfield Fisher, the school-ma'am novelist.

Jane Addams, the grandmother of social service.

These are the people who might be expected to know something about education. In addition there is the usual list of "big shots."

Only a Cool Million Needed to Carry Out Plan

Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith, both of whom might be willing to emerge from retirement again to save the nation. Also Newton D. Baker and William D. Green. Why Owen Young and Ogden Mills are omitted I can't guess.

There is the set-up. All that is necessary is about a million dollars, which the Council believes could be raised by voluntary contributions from the states, of $25,000 per state. Furthermore commercial stations now paying for sustaining programs totaling 25,000 hours per week would probably be willing to help support the educational programs.

On the surface, this does not look like a bad idea. It is unfortunate that the Council wants to put things into the hands of the same old crowd of big names, who are already so busy that they couldn't give any time to it, instead of finding a new lot of younger, more aggressive, less conventional men and women who are equally interested in good radio and interesting educational and cultural ideas.

In the list of names constituting the membership there are many names which are guarantees of intelligence and disinterestedness. Dr. R. A. Millikan, young President R. N. Hutchins, of Chicago University, Dr. Livingston Farrand, Michael Pupin, Secretaries Wallace and Perkins, and others.

The chief difficulty seems to me to lie in the determination of the Council to cut obsolutely adrift from the exciting channels of broadcasting. I do not mean the wave-lengths, but the organizations that are now in charge of this whole business of radio entertainment and instruction. Specifically the big chain organizations. Whatever their faults, the heads of the great chain organizations know more about what can be done and can't be done than any others. They may have sold out to commercial programs to such an extent as to disgust the public; they may have allowed the air to be flooded with unnecessary stupidity, banality, and vulgarity, but they do know that even the presentation of information and opinion is an art and must be treated as an art.

Even the Uplift Threatens to Be a Bore

I rather shudder to think what would happen if a bunch of stations—even short wave stations—fell entirely into the hands of professional pedagogues, uplifters, and idealists. I am willing to guess that within a very short time they would alienate a very large part of their audience, no matter how willing and enthusiastic and favorable that audience might be.

No doubt they could hold the attention of the intellectuals, of the people more or less on the same level as the speakers. But if they do only that they will have failed miserably. The project will fail unless it attracts hundreds of thousands of "regular folks" away from the commercial programs. And my guess is that educational programs managed by the kind of people I mentioned above would simply bore the public off the air.

The commercial chains need not fear that competition. I believe that with proper financial support the professionals could handle the matter better than the amateurs. Already they are doing it to as great an extent as is financially possible. With the Council's subsidy some short-wave lengths free for such programs, and their hard-won knowledge of how to reach the public, it is possible that the radio might really become an important factor in American education and cultural progress. But avoid the conscious uplift!

CASSASA, WOMAN BATTLE ON BEER PERMIT

100 P.C. WEEKLY PROMISED BY 'BENEFACTOR'

Told to "Gift Family" Investor When She Wanted Her Money

When glowing pictures of the "Gift Family" benefactor's generosity fell on deaf ears, Mrs. Florence C. Hascall, Back Bay widow, declared that the benefactor's director was going to turn philanthropist and pay 100 per cent a week to investors, it was testified in Middlesex superior court today.

Mrs. Hascall is on trial with her son, Coburn Woodbury, Miss Hazel B. Leland of Newton and Miss Ida N. Farnum of Arlington, all charged with conspiracy to steal.

A fourth woman named in the indictment, Mrs. Mary J. Mason of Malden, is not on trial but has been sworn as a government witness.

Miss Lillian L. Butterworth of 155 Summer st., Somerville, who declared that at one time her principal and interest in the "Gift Family" totaled as high as $40,000, testified that last May Mrs. Hascall first tol dher of the "Gift Family" director's intention of turning philanthropist and paying 100 per cent interest.

'BENEFACTOR' BECAME CROSS

This, according to the witness was after Mrs. Hascall had told her that she could not get her $40,000 out just then "because of the depression." The money was safe, however, Miss Butterworth was assured.

Mrs. Hascall also told Miss Butterworth, the latter testified, that the benefactor was becoming cross with the doubters and impatient investors and had said they must get out of the "Gift Family" in favor of a chosen few. Only those agreeable to Mrs. Hascall would be allowed to remain in, an dno querelous ones were wanted.

Under cross-examination, Miss Butterworth testified Mrs. Hascall named Ida Farnum as a friend of the benefactor and his beneficiary for 40 years.

Appearing as a witness who actually turned a profit out of the "Gift Family," Mrs. Alma W. Hermes of 25 Scott rd., Belmont testified that Coburn Woodbury, whom she had known 12 or 13 years, called her up one day and told her of the benefactor and what he was doing for friends and friends of his friends.

COMPARED TO PONZI

Later Mrs. Hascall called and said the benefactor was a well known Bostonian "who can never live long enough to spend even the interest on his millions."

Mrs. Hermes said she protested that it sounded like a Ponzi scheme to her, to which Mrs. Hascall replied:

"No! No! Ponzi gave corporation checks. I'm giving my personal checks, backed by my friends."

Mrs. Hascall also called Mrs. Hermes' husband on the telephone and invited him to invest, but he also refused. Finally, Mrs. Hermes testified, she invested $600 but instead of losing her money she finally got back the $600 and $350 more.

DRY AGENTS AID DEFENSE OF M'GRATH

Lorden and Others Are Ready to Help Refute the Bootleg Charge

Prohibition agents were on hand as surprise defense witnesses today as Sergt. John C. McGrath went on trial before Mayor Burke in [illegible] Medford aldermanic chamber, which was filled to overflowing with a large crowd [illegible].

McGrath, ousted following discovery of his elopement with a wealthy West Medford girl, Annette Claire Murphy, 20, is fighting for reinstatement.

McGrath walked into the hearing room with Dennis T. Lordan, chief field agent for the Prohibition bureau, followed by Prohibition Agent Edward Thomas, both of whom, it was learned, were summoned by the defense.

They will used to combat the charge that McGrath associated with a notorious bootlegger, and will be called on to tell about seizure of a still in West Medford, it is understood.

Many women were in the crowd that struggled for the 175 seats in the aldermanic room. McGrath was greeted with applause when he entered.

Another new witness was Mrs. Florence Nazzaro of Webster st., wife of Felix Nazzaro, in whose home McGrath and his bride of four months visited after the secret wedding in Portsmouth, N. H., January 17.

McGrath's divorced wife, Mrs. Alice Perry McGrath, waited in Mayor Burke's office. It is believed she will aid McGrath who is under court orders to pay $12 a week to her for support of their son.

Lieutenants J. Frank Ward, William Golding and William McLaughlin, whom the defense intends to cross-examine regarding the correctness of police records, relating to McGrath's alleged absence from the city without leave at the time of his marriage, were also on hand.

McGrath and the schoolgirl eloped last January. This was revealed but a few days ago. Then came the ousting of McGrath from the police force. The hearing was ordered. It started yesterday. McGrath demanded a postponement until today.

SUMMER WILL BE A SEASON OF "LITTLE" HATS, MANY SCARFS, COTTON GLOVES

Linens and Cotton Popular Choice for Accessories With Summer Clothes

By Margaret Matson

PERHAPS IT'S just because we're beginning to like clothes better that we're able to find so much fun in the fashions this season. And again, perhaps it's because there's more fun to be found. But we never knew them to be so delightful. Changing accessories is like changing one's mind. Simply inevitable, and quite quite painless. Even our emaciated bank account gives a rousing cheer.

We need a new hat, and what do we do? We buy it across a counter—standing up, and waiting our turn at the mirror. And the fact that there are fifty other widely assorted customers buying the same hat doesn't matter a particle. A little flat sailor with a grosgrain band and tiny elastic in back to keep it on one's head.

A pique fez, if we like, or a pique hat with a brim and a higher crown that dips toward the front. A linen hat with a three-inch brim. One of [illegible] relatively concocted arrangements that one can wear in whatever way she pleases. The circus hat, the one with the loop, little berets, pillboxes. And if we can't decide between two or three or several we take them all with very little strain on the purse strings. One dollar and ninety-five cents, $2.95 perhaps, is what they cost us.

And if we're a bit more extravagant we might lift the price to $7.50 or so and get one of those broad-brimmed linens of the Merry Widow or picture variety that we are seeing about town.

We saw a very smart person wearing one the other day. A black linen dress with a bow of white linen at the throat, a broad-brimmed black linen hat with a modernistic white ornament to enliven it, and a white linen coat, white linen [illegible] bag and pumps.

For, of course, as soon as we treat ourselves to a new hat we must get the other accessories to match it, or at least to be in very close harmony with it. Handbags, scarfs and gloves are all co-operating.

There are cotton piques, cotton matelasses, muslins, linens, silk crepes, and silk jerseys [illegible] for hats, handbags, gloves and scarfs. Even shoes are adding cotton and linen to their list of materials.

Among the handbags there are delightfully practical summer things. Cottons with covers that can be removed to launder, for instance. That eliminates one very large problem. And many of them are in dark colors that probably will last the season without needing a tubbing.

Listen, World! Chivalry or Conceit?

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Elsie Robinson

THE DISTRICT NURSE and I were talking things over.

She's a good egg, the District Nurse, with a merry eye and understanding heart—and with none of those secret grudges which seem to animate so many social service workers. So I knew she'd give me worth while information when I asked:

"What's the worst problems you're meeting these days?"

"The men who can't take it!" she laughed back, then went on seriously, but still with that woman-to-woman twinkle.

"You don't know what I mean? Yet you must meet it in your own work. It has become so common that there's almost one to every family—some unemployed man with a working wife.

"Of course, theoretically, a man in a jam like that should be grateful—and he usually is, at first. For the first few days. But then the trouble starts.

"For if he's any sort of a man at all, he simply can't take it. His male egotism won't stand it. He can't bear to think that the Missis has anything on him. He may know a hundred men in the same fix, but he still feels like an outcast. So he can't rest until he finds a way out."

"Which is what?" I asked—though I already knew.

"That depends on the man," said the District Nurse. "Some men take to drink or gambling. The best ones usually get sick."

"Really sick?"

"Maybe not at first. But it doesn't take you very long to think yourself into a real sickness, if that's what you want. And such men do really want sickness—or anything else that will save their faces. And after all, who can blame them?"

"Why not?" I sniffed. "It's tough not to have a job, and to be forced to depend on the other fellow. But after all women have had to stand it for a good many generations."

The District Nurse grinned. "I thought you always stood up for the men," she jibed.

"I do—but I'm not dumb," I jibed back. "I'm on to their ways, even if I do like the sex. And I've yet to see the man who didn't think he was conferring a Big Favor on a woman if he asked her to give up a $6000 yearly salary, with all the freedom and perquisites, and live on his $3.50 per. Yet if he has to ask her for carfare, he's the world's worst martyr."

"And how I know it!" sighed the District Nurse. "I've eleven of 'em on my list right now—eleven sick husbands, with every deadly ailment from ingrowing hairs to dandruff—and all because they can't bear to see the wife working when they aren't.

"Of course the soreheads would solve it by making all the women give up their jobs. But it isn't as easy as that. You can't turn history back. Men stole women's jobs, out of the home, before women ever began taking men's jobs. And now women are in industry to stay. So this thing isn't just a depression problem. It's one of the big, new, human adjustments that's going to raise Cain until it's settled. And in the meantime, what a holler the men are putting up!"

"And they call it chivalry!" I laughed. "Is it? Or is it just plain ornery, male conceit? I wonder."

The Marry-Go-Round; Man's Own Fault

By HELEN ROWLAND

SOMEHOW, everybody's heart goes out in sympathy to a man who is married to the wrong woman. Nobody blames him. Everybody pities him!

Helen Rowland

* * *

Yet, all arguments to the contrary, it is the man, nine times out of ten, who does the choosing, whether it's choosing a dance-partner or a life-partner. If you don't believe it, just try to marry one of them against his will!

* * *

If women really could do the choosing, the traffic to Reno would dwindle down to nothing and the lawyers would starve. Because a woman knows exactly what she wants when she goes shopping for a husband—but a man just snatches blindly at the first thing that dazzles him.

* * *

If a man insists on selecting a life-mate for her ornamental qualities, why pity him because he has to get up and make the breakfast while she gets her beauty sleep and rises only in time to make the bridge party?

* * *

Oh yes, I know how pitiable and appealing unhappily married men seem! I've let myself feel sorry for them too—but only academically. All the time, my common sense was demanding to know why a man who employs an architect to plan his house, an expert to plant his garden and a manager to run his office, should insist on selecting his own wife, all by himself. Especially in view of the mess men have made of this job since time immemorial.

* * *

"If he had married the right sort of a man," says the world, "he never would have squandered his money, gone to the devil or gotten tangled up with the other woman." Of course, he wouldn't! And if he hadn't swallowed the cocktail, he never would have had the headache. When it comes to the choice of a mate, a man holds all the winning cards. Yet when he plays a rotten game, he expects to be pitied!

* * *

A husband may be only one of the wedding-gifts—but a wife is a man's OWN FAULT.

THE DAILY TRUE STORY

The Greater Grief

"I TELL YUH, no jury'd convict me. I was within my rights. He violated my home."

His black eyes shifted animal-like from object to object ceaselessly, coming to rest on my face quickly, only to as quickly turn away.

The man had been arrested for assaulting a doctor with intent to kill. The court had appointed me, a young lawyer eager for practice and experience, to defend him.

He was one of those queer foreign mixtures to be found in every large city, Americanized to the degree of loud clothes and a glib use of certain phrases, yet still the product of his environment, hedged in by prejudices and walled about by ignorance.

"Certainly I tried to kill him." There was a dogged menace in his tones and I hastened to keep him from implicating himself further, but he would not be quieted.

"He ruined me; there's nothing more to live." His short stained fingers loosened the collar of his striped shirt and I felt sorry for the man as one pities a hurt beast.

NEVER SICK BEFORE

"My wife's never been sick a day, I tell you, but that one time. She wasn't even sick then, just thin and coughin' some. Her cheeks were red, and her eyes bright. But once he got in, he had tuh come every day. Always when I was out."

My heart went out to this poor illiterate fellow sitting there on the edge of his bunk. I was in love myself with a beautiful young girl, and no matter what the walk of life, a wife was a wife, and, as I knew, jealousy an incurable disease.

"He was always snoopin' around. Made me send away three of the children. Left only the oldest girl to look after things. Said they bothered their mother. A woman has no right to be bothered by her children. They're hers, ain't they? I did not know what to do with 'em."

A queer man indeed, I mused, loving this woman so passionately, so intensely, yet understanding so little the quiet she needed in her last hours.

"But I know why he did it. Wanted them outa the way. Gave 'im more chance to snoop. Violatin' my home, I tell yuh. The home I paid for all myself. It took me years to get together those things. Things I expected to enjoy in my old age. Now it's all gone.

"It wasn't a week before he made me get outta the bed room. With a sick wife and all, he mighta known I didn't have the money for a housekeeper. But he took my wife away from me, the ——" and he called the physician a name it is unwise to repeat.

"He made her sleep with the window open. I hadda get a carpenter to come in and take all the nails out. Of course she died—with the air blowin' on her all the time. Even then he wouldn't let me alone, let me do things the way we do in the old country. No, I must bury her the next day."

My heart welled up within me with sympathy for this man who was refused even the solace of the last hours with the deceased.

"Then he brought some men while we were at the graveyard. 'Fumigated,' they said. The whole house—even the cellar. Wouldn't let me in my own home. Do yuh understand?"

BECAME WILD

His furtive eyes had now become wild and frenzied. I did my best to quiet him; I tried to explain how the doctor had no doubt eased the woman's last days, had mitigated her suffering rather than been responsible for her demise. I condoled with him for the loss of his wife.

"Wife?" he shrieked. "It ain't my wife I'm worried about now. It's my wine! She was worn out, anyway, but my wine was just aged right. Now it's gone."

He had sprung up and stood with his big, hairy fist raised menacingly.

"Ruined! Absolutely ruined! The work of years. He done it. Fumigatin' my cellar. Sure I tried to kill him. He violated my home I tell yuh, and no jury of twelve men'd ever convict me for that."

Noticing his belligerent attitude and remembering the charge placed against him, I dared not contradict.

Grooming

THE PAPER CURL is achieved by dividing the hair in small strands, starting at the end to form a circle that continues on up to the scalp. Cover with a three-cornered piece of paper, pin tight, let remain until the hair is dry. Best time to do it is immediately after the shampoo while the hair contains some moisture — isn't dripping, of course.

Various Ways to Eat More Fruit

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

IF YOU WOULD lay the foundation for perfect health, fairly bubbling with vim, vigor and vitality, see that plenty of fresh fruits are included in your diet. Fruits are known as "protective" foods, since their primary function, like that of the Chinese doctor, is the guard against disease and keep us well.

Fortunately, some fruits are available all the year round, among the most popular are bananas and oranges, so luscious in their natural state and leading themselves to a wide variety of dishes. These two fruits seem to have a natural affinity for each other. When served in combination, they supply energy for operating the body machinery and liberal quantities of essential vitamins and mineral salts.

Banana-Orange Tapioca

1½ cups milk
⅓ cup quick tapioca
Salt
½ cup sugar
3 bananas
½ cup orange juice
2 eggs

Scald milk in double boiler, add tapioca and salt. Cook 15 minutes until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Beat egg yolks, add sugar, and stir into tapioca mixture. Cook over hot water 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool slightly. Chop bananas into orange juice, and add to tapioca mixture. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Chill. Garnish with banana and orange slices. Serves six.

Banana-Marshmallow Dessert

Faulty Posture Will Cause Trouble

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

DURING [illegible] have helped us to ward off spinal deformities and other defects of the body. [illegible]

Scoliosis, or spinal curvature, as it is more commonly called, is a distortion or [illegible] of the spine. The disease was more prevalent when little was known about the value and necessity of proper posture.

Dr. Copeland

Though bad posture is a common cause, spinal curvature may result from certain [illegible] diseases, such as [illegible] or congenital hip disease.

The affliction is seen in adults and children. In children faulty posture is the most common cause. In adults, the deformity may be traced to occupation.

I can think of no better preventive of scoliosis than the forming of proper habits of posture. Faulty posture leads to many physical disturbances. Nausea, headache, lack of appetite, nervousness, constipation and backache often can be traced to faulty posture.

Postural training and special exercises are necessary for the correction of spinal curvature in children. It is best that these exercises be given under the supervision of one who is trained in the work.

YO, HO! AND A BOTTLE OF RUM . . . only [illegible] there wasn't any rum . . . the evening ended [illegible] the memory lingers on . . .

The Fo'castle, one of the best known barks to sail into Marblehead harbor, topped her record last evening with a gala celebration to inaugurate another season of summer pleasure cruising along the North Shore . . .

MRS. A. C. BURRAGE, JR.

We . . . the E. N. O. and a rising young lieutenant of the B. A . . . boarded the old windjammer as she struck seven bells . . . skys looked lowry but all was cheery on board, ropes ship-shape on the fife rails, hurricane lamps lighted and the binnacle a splendor of newly polished brass . . .

Capt. Raymond Brackett, master and owner of the Fo'castle, famous along the North Shore for his successful launchings over a period of 20 years, greeted us at the gangway, a genial and jolly host, not only famous for his hospitality and conviviality but also a maritime painter of note . . .

We had the pleasure of viewing some of his sea-scapes in the foyer of the grand salon and commended the judges who awarded him prizes during the past year . . . one, "The Birth of a Navy," was particularly noteworthy, and depicted a small schooner sailing out from Marblehead harbor under the very bows of a British man-o-war and firing a broadside into her, with telling effect. When Capt. Brackett tires of the sea-faring life, he can take up his pallette and tell tales of the sea as he has seen it . . . we know of no one who could do it better.

A goodly crowd from the Shore and as far away as Boston showed up at the launching . . . we saw that delightful little post-debutante Lilla Draper and her charming friend, Kay Brown, with a couple of smoothies dancing the hours away to the sweet strains of Joe Holmes and his melodious privateers . . .

Delicious Dinner Served

THE TOWN FATHERS filed in in a body to enjoy a night at sea and a delicious dinner . . . fruit cocktail, lobster, chicken, salad, ices and all the fixings . . . having a salty appetite ourselves, we dove right in and prayed that Dr. Hay would help us repair the damage to our girlish figure with his rabbit food for the week after . . . who could resist a lighthouse designed from strawberry ice cream, set on rocks of marshmallows and whipped cream with a beacon light of cherries to give the effect . . . not WE.

It was celebrity night on the old ship, too . . . our new, young commander of the State constabulary, Gen. Dan Needham, with his charming wife, was with a party which included Gen. John Sherburne and Mrs. Sherburne, Mr. and Mrs. George Ricker, Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson Taylor and Mr. Fordam Kimball, who was escorting the attractive Miss Emma Laskey.

Ruby Newman with a charming little lady in baby blue and silver fox was in a party of four . . . he informed us that he is really going abroad this summer (sorry to hear it) but may have the good fortune to be a pupil of the great Cassellas in Caprix . . . we are impressed!

Mr. and Mrs. Somebody Fellows of Ipswich were among those enjoying a whirl around and we saw Mr. William Morgan and a party having a good time in the main salon . . .

Blonde and pretty Mary Lyons and her husband, "Gregg," came to break a bottle of real beer and we saw Eleanor Saunders in the arms of a swain as she swirled back and forth over the VERY slippery deck . . . it really WAS the deck and not the beer that sent us all reeling whenever the band struck up a lively tune . . .

Eight bells and we had to trip up the gangplank as we sent back cheery greetings and a happy voyage for the Fo'castle at the Hotel Rockmere, Marblehead.

When You Take Medicine Take It Seriously

Poisonous impurities accumulating in the intestinal tract, resulting from constipation, often cause sluggishness, headaches, loss of appetite, and nervousness. Any of these conditions may develop into a menace to your efficiency and physical well-being. Serious thought should be given to the elimination of the cause of these symptoms.

BOOKS---A Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

A young writer from the Middle West wishes to know if it would be advisable for him to publish his first book at his own expense. He says it is a novel which he has offered to several firms, that it has been returned in each case, yet he has a natural desire to see it in print. No unfavorable criticisms have come to him—the MS. has simply come home to roost, accompanied always by polite but cold letters.

I think it is useless, and even foolish, to pay to have a volume put before the public. If the young man's story were of any merit he may be sure that it would eventually find a publisher, one who would be willing to bear the cost of issuing and advertising it. The fact that no publisher has thus far thought it important enough to suggest that it is even "promising" almost spells its doom. It is probably a sincere, but inadequate effort. If the real stuff were in it, with minor faults of construction and characterization, some trained reader might have suggested where it could be recast and improved, and such news would have been sent to the author. But it is probably a crude piece of work; and in these desperate days in the publishing world no chances can afford to be taken. Unless a MS. seems to have more than average merit it will, of course, be rejected. Almost in any time, but more particularly now.

There are several minor publishing houses which offer alluring promises to unknown writers. They write letters to names on lists which they obtain from various literary societies, and hold out dreams of great rewards. This is only another racket. No reputable firm would clutter up its catalog with indifferent fiction. This would soon ruin its standing with the retail bookshops. An established house is always ready to stand solidly behind any volume upon which it places its imprint, and both reviewers and the public soon learn to take their products seriously.

My advice would be for this young man to put his first MS away in lavender. Five years from now, if he has published something else, he will take out this initial effort and reread it. Then he will wonder why he ever thought it worthy to be put in the mail. He will charge up his attempts at publishing to profit and loss, and be glad that he learned something in the hard school of experience.

There is no short and royal road to success. A desire to publish early is a form of exhibitionism—a disease which can be quickly cured if one has a sense of humor.

Purple Gang Nearest to Capone as 'Boss'

Wanton Murders and Many Kidnapings Put Terror in Detroit's Heart

By DAMON RUNYON

(This is the 13th of a series of articles on rackets and racketeers)

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Damon Runyon

New York, May 26—Alphonse Capone, in Chicago, seems to have been the only man of sufficient genius, force of character, or whatever you want to call it, to organize the racket in his town under one central government.

It took time and bloodshed, but it appeared that he had finally accomplished it when the government moved in on him. He must have had something of the same executive ability and ruthlessness that has produced a Hitler. I have often wondered where Capone might have gone had he been aligned on the side of law and order. Perhaps nowhere. Perhaps his genius wasn't adaptable to the methods of law and order.

In no other city of any size in the United States was one man able to do what Capone did in Chicago. His organization was rated the controlling body, and Capone was the dictator, apparently supreme.

Nearly every dictator has to climb over the bodies of human beings, and over the statute books of the land to reach his dictatorship.

If Capone seemed to be [illegible] toward peace in the later days of his regime it was probably because there were few of his enemies left to give him trouble.

Also, every gang leader, as he grows older, waxes affluent, and gets a taste of the feather beds of life, years for quietude. It would have been interesting to see how Capone would have fared as a peaceful despot.

Probably [illegible] his [illegible] would have been a [illegible] and said:

"Let's get rid of that old bloke, and have a little action around here."

Life is that way in gangland.

In New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and other big cities, no individual ever rose in gangland to a position corresponding to that held by Capone in Chicago.

Some tried it, but all failed.

There was a picturesque chap named Duffy, a loud dresser and a high roller, who had some idea of taking possession of Philadelphia, a la Capone, some years ago, but they mowed him down in Atlantic City while he was inhaling the ocean breezes, and since then the city of brotherly love has been widely apportioned among quite petty celebrities in the various forms of the racket.

Especially the booze racket which once was important there. Indeed, at one time, Philadelphia held high place in the liquor racket, because it was Philadelphians who first taught their brethren in Chicago and elsewhere how to make [illegible] some years ago. A coterie of Philadelphians went to Chicago in the pioneer days of the racket to teach the late Mr. Dion O'Bannion and his cohorts how to make "alky." Mr. O'Bannion at that time being alive and intensely active in the affairs of his home town.

The consideration for the teaching was to be $100,000, but having acquired the lesson from the Philadelphians, one of the O'Bannions rather logically argued:

"Why pay these muggs 100 G's? Let us just crunch in these boys' skulls, and keep the money and the secret, too."

'LEGS' NOT 'AL'S' EQUAL

Well, they talked him out of the idea, but the Philadelphians went back home, very pale, and with no money, and that is the reason why some Philadelphians to this day distrust Chicagoans.

But I digress.

With the passing of booze, Philadelphia has become racketeering small time. It almost makes one weep to visit "Philly" and see to what base uses the once proud booze racketeers of that town have descended.

In New York the racket leaders have always been purely local to their own section. No man ever rose to a Capone dictatorship over the Entire City. No one combination ever controlled all the rackets of the town.

It was even so back in the days of the old time gangs—the Hudson Dusters, the Five Pointers, the Gophers, and all the rest. The mob wars of later years have usually been for control of some one section only. Brooklyn has long been a favorite battle ground, and the roll of dead of the borough beyond the tubes has been a long one. It includes the names of such as Frankie Yale, Vannie Higgins and Joe the Boss.

Yet these fellows were local to their own section. Oddly enough, the New York racketeers who got the most publicity were of the [illegible] eminence in racketeering. For instance, Jack "Legs" Diamond, a thin, sickly-looking chap who was frequently shot at, and frequently hit, but who survived all bullets except one that finally came his way in Albany.

"Legs" Diamond received vast publicity not only in this country, but all over the world, and yet I [illegible] if he ever enjoyed the power and emoluments in racketeering that his publicity suggested. Indeed the police were somewhat puzzled by the persistency with which Diamond's enemies sought his life.

PURPLE MURDERERS

The combination that, next to Capone's, came closest to dominating an entire city, was the so-called Purple Mob of Detroit, which started with a gang of young hoodlums pillaging fruit merchants and shopkeepers. For nearly ten years, beginning with about 1918, the Purples held sway in Detroit, taking about $500,000 a year from legitimate business men, and millions in liquor, and other rackets.

The Purples endeavored to conduct their felonies along the line of the advanced methods produced by Capone, and with utter disregard for human life. They went in for "business" organization of cleaners and dyers, and one thing and another.

They ruled the Detroit roost. Inspired by their example, other mobs developed in Detroit, including one devoted to kidnaping, with a rather fabulous character named Fred Burke as the instructor. Burke was one of many gunners in gangland rejoicing in the appelation "The Killer."

Like the "Mad Dog" of New York, Vincent Coll, and scores of other of these wanton slayers that bobbed up in the underworld during the prohibition pogrom, Burke was what the boys call "gun daffy." He is now in prison with a joblot of his Detroit kidnaping associates.

It is improbable that the Purples committed every crime registered on the police blotters of Detroit during their regime, of course, but the impression seemed to be pretty general that you couldn't do business in Detroit unless you got the Purple okay.

What held them up across the long period of their administration is something I will not go into at this time, but I presume it was some occult force over which our ordinary human powers had no control.

As in a lot of other American cities that were given over to gang rule for years with nobody seeming to trouble themselves about discovering why. And now most of the Purples are dead, or in jail, and all that is left of their flourishing in Detroit is just enough roots to justify the fear of some Detroiters that they may start branching out again at any time.

These Orders Talk Louder Than Whisper

By B. C. Forbes

New York, May 26—Orders talk. They are now raising their voice above a whisper. They ring more and more confident each day.

B. C. Forbes

Since other pages and columns cover comprehensively the many-sided drama being enacted in Washington, suppose we scan actual happenings in the bread-and-butter world of business.

R. G. Thackara, chairman of the United States Intercoastal Conference, consisting of 14 steamship lines, tells me that, whereas January was the lowest month in his experience in the movement of cargo westward from Atlantic Coast loading ports to Pacific Coast discharging ports, there has been a progressive increase each month since. Last month's tonnage represented an improvement of 45 per cent over January.

There are few more accurate barometers of industrial conditions than traffic volume.

H. H. Springford, president of Servel, informes me that sales of their new air-cooled gas refrigerator are running 100 per cent above last month and that last month's sales were 30 per cent above factory estimates. "At present rates," he adds, "May will be one of the biggest months we have ever had. Purchases this year are turning more heavily than ever to home installations."

The company's plant at Evansville, Ind., is operating on a double shift. Even so, orders are coming in faster than can be filled.

A wire from the Acme White Lead & Color Works, Detroit, to this column records that full working forces and overtime are now the rule in all their factories. Vice President Clarence A. Campbell states that this rush of business means that consumers are buying and that dealers are bringing their stocks up to necessary levels but are not buying for speculation.

Lloyd E. Back, of the E. H. Scott Radio Laboratories, gives me the cheering news that "during the past two years we have never been able to keep abreast of orders. Even the bank moratorium didn't stem the flood of new customers, notwithstanding that we sell direct to the consumer a product rather high in price and in the luxury class. May promises to far exceed May of last year."

LEWIS HANEY FRANK H. MELOON
B. C. FORBES SPECTATOR'S COMMENT

Live News of Leaders Today in Wall Street

BROKERS generally regard the reduction in the rediscount rate of the New York bank as a psychological supplement to the open market program of the Federal Reserve and an adjustment to the current level of money rates in the open market.

Simultaneously, weekly statements of Reserve Banks showed additions to the government securities portfolio of $25,000,000, bringing the total holdings to $1,862,000,000, the largest amount since March 22.

Repeal Is Hope of "Wet" Stocks

The spectacular rise in alcohol stocks has been in sympathy with the advance in National Distillers, based on hopes of an early repeal of prohibition. A more concrete reason, however, is the material improvement in the business of alcohol companies within the last few weeks, due to a revival of demand for alcohol and alcohol compounds from a diversity of industries.

Steel Scrap Prices Are Eased Afresh

Steel scrap prices for the second successive week eased further, reversing the recent upward trend which lasted for weeks. Though scrap is considered one of the sensitive barometers of the steel industry, such a reaction at this time is considered entirely normal.

See Exchange Showing Stern Front Hereafter

The announcement of the expulsion of a member of the Stock Exchange stopped the ticker for a few minutes yesterday morning. Coming on the heels of the overnight announcement on Allied, the general feeling in the Street was to look for another important announcement. When the expulsion was ticked off on the tape, the general reaction was that the Stock Exchange authorities from now on are prepared to display an extremely stern front to the slightest infraction of the rules. Brokers, themselves, however, did not consider the incident helpful to the market, though pointing to the fact that the Exchange is empowered and ready to act in cases where it finds its rules of conduct disobeyed.

Commodities' Rise Effect Is Studied

The rise in staples and by-product commodities is expected to find reflection in increased earnings of a number of companies. One survey points out that the rise in hides, a by-product of the packing industry, will materially bolster the income of packing companies.

Oil Prices Displaying Firming Tendency

Firmness in crude oil and refined prices are beginning to be felt in certain sections of the country, despite the heavy over-production in virtually all fields, oil men report. It was reported that purchasers of crude oil were having some difficulty in filling their needs at the present posted price of 25 cents a barrel in the mid-continent, and that some of the smaller buyers were paying a premium.

The expected increase in car registrations is expected to top normal seasonal demand. Coupled with this, the broad general revival in industry which is believed underway, would exceed consumption estimates and account for the firmness in the old price structure.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE STRONG

Strength of the Boston & Maine issues featured late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today with four of the preferred and stamped shares moving to new highs for the year. Boston & Maine preferred jumped 3 points and the prior preferred was a point higher at fresh 1933 tops.

NEW ENGLAND BUILDING HAS FRESH GAIN

By FRANK H. MELOON

Figures furnished us today show another gain for New England building. Contracts awarded during the week ended May 23 totaled $3,345,000, according to the F. W. Dodge Corp., comparing with the weekly average for the year to date date of $1,437,500. A year ago in the like week the total was $1,843,400. The total a week ago was $2,339,700 and in the previous week $1,506,700.

Chairman Herbert L. Pratt of Socony Vacuum Corp. points to drastic savings effected in the corporation's operations, bringing a saving in the past year of several millions of dollars. He pointed out the pertinent fact, however, that in the "last analysis a fair return on the company's investment will depend on receiving a fair price for the products themselves."

This good Yankee suggestion (Mr. Pratt comes from old New England stock) applies equally to other than the oil corporations.

The old business barometer of carloadings is recording fresh gains. The latest big line to show ahead of 1932 is that of Daniel Willard, able Vermonter, Baltimore & Ohio's loadings for the week ended May 20 totaled 34,038 cars, against 33,822 in the same week last year, an increase of 6-10ths of 1 per cent and is the first time that loadings this year exceeded those of 1932.

* * *

Carloadings figures reported to date make it appear likely that tomorrow's complete report will show a figure equal to or a shade better than a year ago. Last week Class 1 roads showed an increase of 2.6 per cent over a year ago. The only previous like gain since the initial week of 1930 was in the week ended Dec. 24, last year, and was due to the Christmas holiday falling in different weeks.

STATE ST.

Hears:

That the ability of the conservative element to prevent a runaway market on false hopes of immediate inflation is reassuring. If prices were at lower levels it would be construed as a reliable buying signal. As it is, extent of the recent rise prevents the offering of anything other than trading advice, and then only to the fast in-and-out operator. Bound by such strict limitations, moderate taking of stocks is being suggested on further dips.

Market Action

The primary thought for investors who may be tempted to step in, now that the speculative crowd is preparing to take another flier, is that this market is still being distributed. This may sound all only been about 2 points higher an analysis of prices in the last month.

United States Steel is currently selling at the same price that ruled a month ago. And it has only been about 2 points higher than that price. American Can made a high of 87⅝ early in the upswing. It managed to get 2 points higher, but it now shows little if any change.

Street Gossip

The fact of the matter is that recent market action has featured the rails and a few specialties. These have done well and it paid to have them. But the intricacies of picking the right stock are too much for the average investor not following the tape.

Many weeks ago it was noted here that a rise in cigarette prices was set for June 15. It was further stated that information had come to the writer from reliable sources which indicated that the new base price would be $6 per thousand. It is now being universally broadcast. H. E. B.

HANEY STUDIES ADVANCE IN COMMODITIES

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, May 26—It should be of interest now to observe the effects of the first wave of "inflation" upon commodity prices, and particularly upon different commodities.

We may be able to get some light concerning the question as to whether price maladjustments will be remedied by inflation.

I therefore present a comparison of wholesale price advances in a list of representative commodities. The figures are the percentage changes between April 15, just before the gold suspension, and May 20.

	Per cent
Hides	+75
Hogs	41
Tin	41
Sheetings, etc	35
Copper	44
Steel scrap	+33
Leather	23
Lime	+21
Cotton	19
Linseed oil	14
Canned tomatoes	+14
Wheat	13
Sulphate ammonia	+12
Turpentine	12
Canned milk	10
Flour	+ 8
Worsted yarn	7
Pig iron	7
Canned salmon	+ 6
Beef steers	5
Nitrate of soda	4
Eggs	— 2

The list illustrates the fact that nearly all wholesale prices have risen, thus showing the general effect of inflation on all prices.

One point to bear in mind is that many prices have been held up artificially and not been deflated, such as important items of finished steel and some building materials.

Another fact is that some, like bituminous coal, have long been depressed, and were low even in 1926.

Whatever merits inflation may have, let us not fool ourselves by imagining that it alone can correct maladjustments among the prices of different commodities. It may raise all prices (in paper money), but no one can tell how much, especially in any particular case.

Bond Offerings in Week Are Larger

New bond issues formally offered in the New York market this week totaled $10,177,000, compared with $4,000,000 a week ago and $18,066,950 a year ago.

Trade and [illegible] this week and the Dun and Bradstreet [illegible] view today has shown more consistent improvement than [illegible] week in the [illegible] three years.

"The rise in general business," the agency stated, "has now been lifted to a level sufficiently high to reveal its stability, which appears to be fortified adequately to withstand the usual seasonal recessions of the summer months.

"Reports of steadily increasing employment continue to be received from centers devoted to the production of steel and allied products, automobiles, textiles, rubber goods, shoes and leather, and lumber.

RISE MORE THAN SEASONAL

"The course of the leading indices is indicative of the quicker tempo of industrial activity, which has now become too accentuated to be attributed merely to a seasonal rise.

"Preparations for cartelization to align activities with the provisions of the national industrial recovery act has spread from the textile, hosiery, shoe and leather, food products, electrical, lumber, metals, petroleum, dry colors and paperboard industries to a wide group of smaller trades.

"The effects of the new legislation are expected to become concretely evident within three months after passage of the bill.

"With the large department stores and specialty shops, the May turnover gives assurance of surpassing the volume of the comparable preceding year's period for the first time in two years."

Building Total of Week Shows a Gain

F. W. Dodge Corp says that in the week ended May 22 residential construction in states east of the Rockies accounted for $6,562,300 of the total for all classes which amounted to $16,388,800. The daily average for this month's third week for residential building was slightly better than for the preceding fortnight and there is an indication that the May total may exceed a year ago, making the first monthly gain since the spring of 1931.

Wheat Sells Down After Starting Up

Chicago, May 26 (AP)—Wheat prices underwent setbacks today after upturns at the start. Initial strength was associated with firmness of securities and with higher quotations on wheat at Liverpool but speculative buying of wheat here lacked volume. Opening unchanged to [illegible] up, wheat later sagged to below [illegible] Corn also started unchanged to [illegible] higher, and subsequently receded.

Cotton Higher in New York Dealings

New York, May 26—Cotton futures displayed a strong tone today with the run of contracts about 75 cents a bale above previous closing levels. With Liverpool cables 8 to 13 points higher than due, figured on the sterling rate, the market here opened up 6 to 10 points and extended its gains in the subsequent trading. Late prices were up 13 to 15 points with July up 15 at 8.65, October up 13 at 8.89 and December up 14 at 9.05.

Anaconda Develops Its Syndicate Vein

Anaconda Copper Mining Co. has developed for a distance of 3000 feet along the Syndicate vein in its properties at Butte, ore which averages around 16 per cent copper and five ounces silver a ton. This is not a new strike. The Syndicate vein at Butte has been characterized by high-grade ore at depth for several years.

General Business Index Up Slightly

Preliminary index of general business activity in the week ended April 1 was 48.4, which compares with the revised index of 48.1 for the preceding week, according to the Business Week.

STANFORD CHOICE AS IC. GAMES OPEN AT STADIUM

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

MR. BOSTON

Stanford Has Class
Should Win Meet
Shotput Stars

Grady of Harvard
Will Display Speed
In Hurdle Race

By JACK CONWAY

Stanford University will win the intercollegiate I. A. track meet which opens in the Harvard Stadium this afternoon and finishes tomorrow afternoon. Southern California will be second with Yale third.

MR BOSTON

John Brooks, who reports the activities of college track athletes for this newspaper, gave me the above rating of the star college track teams.

"Stanford will pick up at least 23 points in the shotput and discus events," said Brooks with much enthusiasm. "This fellow John C. Lyman of Stanford tosses the 16-pound shot as if it were a baseball. He has thrown it 52 feet ½ inch. Gordon G. Dunn of Stanford has a mark of 51 feet 11 inches. Nelson Gray, also of Stanford, has done 51 feet 1½ inches, while Henri Laborde of Stanford has tossed the shot more than 51 feet. Laborde will probably win the discus throw with a toss of 162 feet or so. Dunn and Gray are also stars in the discus event."

There once was a time when the East was supreme in the shotput and discus, but the young giants from California have forged to the front in these events in recent years.

Johnny Grady of Harvard, with a mark of 23.5 against Yale, is expected to make a bid for first place in the 200 meter low hurdles. Ed Calvin of Harvard will display his amazing ability in the 100 and 200 meter events and also in the broad jump.

One of the great races of the meet is expected in the 800 meter event when Bill Bonthron of Princeton will try to outrun Ben Eastman of Stanford. This contest will bring together the kings of the East and West at this distance.

More than 500 athletes will compete in the intercollegiates. These young men will laugh at old-time records as they go out and do their stuff. Track athletics prove better than any other branch of sports our glorious youth is still marching forward.

College Leaders Made Drastic Cut in Prices

Those persons in charge of the intercollegiate meet have made drastic cuts in the prices of tickets. They have finally realized that Old Jawn Public is a little bit shy of cash after trying to balance the budget while J. Pierpont Morgan and his merry partners paid no income taxes during the past few years. Schoolboys will be admitted to the Stadium for 25 cents. This move will interest youngsters in track sports.

Incidentally that announcement of lower football prices with the Stadium scaled for major games, will be made shortly. Of course readers of this column had the advance tip on this proposed change last November.

Red Sox Need More Hitting in Pinches

If the Red Sox are to parade along Victory Trail, they will require more hitting in the pinches. They lost the opening game against Cleveland because they passed up numerous opportunities to knock in runs. On two different occasions three men were left on bases. A hit at either time would have given the Sox a splendid opportunity for victory.

I find the fans are solidly behind the Sox. They feel Tom Yawkey, Eddie Collins and Marty McManus are doing their utmost to produce a winning combination.

The chief weakness of the club is at shortstop. Rabbit Warstler was replaced by Bill Werber, who was secured from the Yankees. Warstler is a brilliant fielder, but a very weak hitter. Werber is a better hitter than Warstler but his fielding has been ragged. Werber has played with much earnestness despite his errors in fielding, and may yet justify the faith Eddie Collins has in him.

It is necessary for Werber to show well in the field as well as bat. No club can expect to win close games unless it has fielding strength at shortstop. This is the most vital spot in an infield. Werber may steady down once he gets a few breaks. Even ball players have their mental hazards.

'Babe's Just Another Batter Now,' Mourns Sad Sam Jones

By PAT ROBINSON

New York, May 26 (INS)—Lou Gehrig today is a better hitter than Babe Ruth. Moreover, in a tight spot opposing pitchers fear Lou more than Babe.

Worse still, the Babe has fallen so low in their estimation they now consider him just another guy with a bat and if given a chance they'd walk Lou any time to get a crack at Babe.

Babe's downfall as a hitter, [illegible] Sam Jones of the White Sox, [illegible] due to the fact that the Bambino is not taking his full time at the ball. He [illegible] his grip, explains Sam. He [illegible] not taking the [illegible] wallop like he used to."

STILL DANGEROUS

"Of course," Sam tempers his observation, "you must remember the big guy will always be dangerous as long as he can tote a bat. He's still nobody's chump at the plate and you can't afford to monkey with him. But he's not the hitter he used to be. Gehrig is far, far tougher in a pinch. I'd rather see Babe up there."

On top of that, Sam [illegible] with the information that Lou and Babe are no problems for a pitcher.

HATE SLOW BALL

"If they're in a slump," says Sam, "all you have to do is pitch to them like anybody else. Plenty of slow stuff, low outside, for both.

"But if they're hot, the system's even simpler. Just walk 'em and keep on walking 'em. If you don't they might bust up a ball game for you with one wallop."

Sam hides his grief over Babe's [illegible] from the hitting heights with [illegible] complacence. "It's just too bad," chuckles Sam, "But it makes things just that much easier for the rest of us."

U. S. NETMEN IN ZONE TITLE BID TODAY

Washington, May 26 (AP)—The United States Davis Cup team went out to clinch the American Zone honors today, needing victory over Argentina's pressed players.

Clean-cut wins in the opening singles yesterday by Ellsworth Vines and Wilmer Allison, the American team captain, put this country's cup seekers in such a commanding position that there was little doubt as to the finish of the five-match series.

Today's play pitted Johnny Van Ryn and George Lott against Adriano Zappa, Argentina's quick-footed captain, and Adelmar Echeverria.

Even if the American doubles combinations conquer the Argentines today, however, Vines and Allison will play out the two final singles tomorrow, switching the opening day opponents.

An exhibition doubles match was arranged for this afternoon to follow the Davis Cup play. It will throw Vines and Keith Gledhill, holders of the American doubles championship, against Lott and either Van Ryn or Allison. The two pairs are almost evenly matched and sparkling tennis was [illegible]

MULDOON ILL; REST ORDERED

Purchase, N. Y., May 26 (AP)—Enervated by the heat and the weight of years, William Muldoon, [illegible] exponent of physical culture, celebrated the [illegible] anniversary of his birth in bed, secluded from his friends by his physician's order.

For some time the solid man of boxing, sage of the New York State Athletic Commission, has been failing in health and the humid weather of the last few days and the excitement of his birthday proved too much for him.

He was up and about as usual but the burden of several [illegible] sapped his strength and when his physician, Dr. Henry T. Ke[illegible] made his morning call he found Muldoon in bed and hardly strong enough to lift his head.

The doctor immediately ordered the telephone disconnected, barred all friends from the bedroom, and prescribed absolute quite for his patient.

Muldoon is suffering from arthritis.

Shepard-Filene Tilt Is Golf Loop Feature

Eight of the Retail Stores Golf League teams play the third round of their four-ball championship matches today at the Unicorn Country Club. The Jordan Marsh Co. quartet drew a bye.

The Wm. Filene's Sons Co.-Shepard Stores match is the feature attraction of the gathering at Unicorn. Filene's is leading the league with ten points and only two lost, while Shepard is in fifth place, with an even break.

SHEPARD LINEUP SHIFTED

Hoping to put a stop to the onrushing Filene's team, The Shepard Stores lineup is returned to its original pairing. John Shepard, 3d, teams with Ben Black and Robert Shepard will be H. M. Uline's partner.

John Shepard 3d and Ben Black play Jack McCarthy and A. J. Frost, and as the Filene star must give Black five strokes, a close battle is expected. The success or failure of The Shepard Stores will depend upon the No. 2 teams, H. M. Uline and Robert Shepard vs. Jack Egan and George Saxe.

The C. F. Hovey Co. and E. T. Slattery Co., who are tied for second [illegible] with Jordan Marsh, are [illegible] for The [illegible] Stores to halt Filene's, for they are playing R. H. Chauncey S. Williams will make his first appearance in the Sears Roebuck Co., lineup, teaming with Bill Nugent, Jr., against Edmund O'Connell and Paul Carver.

J. Roche and J. Howe, Hovey's, the only pair in the league that has not lost a point in two matches, will tackle Charlie Coyne and Charlie Kemp, R. H. White.

Cochet Expected to Enter Cup Play

Paris, May 26—The French Lawn Tennis Federation takes little stock in Henri Cochet's assertion that he's not going to represent France in the Davis Cup matches this year.

Cochet had stated:

"I may not play on the Davis Cup team this year. It's also not likely that Jean Borotra will play."

Cochet, who has dominated international tennis for France for many recent years until the Americans and English began knocking him off the high perch at Wimbledon two years ago, refused to discuss France's prospects of retaining the famous trophy. He said that Christian Boussus and Jacques Brugnon are "good

Metric Plan Is Scored by Coaches

By Associated Press

Adoption of the metric system for measurement of track events to be used for the first time in 57 years by the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. at the championship meet starting today was condemned by a majority of members of the Track Coaches Association of America, at a meeting in the Hotel Bradford.

On a motion made by Dink Templeton of Stanford the coaches voted, 22 to 3, in opposition to the metric standard and in favor of restoring the traditional linear measurements.

The only votes in favor of the metric system, which has also been adopted by the National Amateur Athletic Union, were those of John Magee of Bowdoin, Mike Ryan of Colby and Jaako Mikkola, Harvard's javelin coach.

Templeton charged the metric system was "railroaded" through the I. C. A. A. A. A.

J. Fred Powers of Brown was elected president of the association, succeeding Edward Farrell of Harvard.

Babe Didrikson Takes Golf Seriously

Detroit, May 26 (AP)—If the women's national golf championship were decided on stamina, Babe Didrikson would be ready right now for the test.

She out-lasted three hardy males over 27 holes on the Orchard Lake course yesterday and was insisting on at least nine holes more, when her companions hobbled to the clubhouse, nursing aches, pains and sunburn.

On the last nine holes she got a 42, six over par, the best score of her career.

While Stanford and Southern California are carrying on their battle for first place in the opening exercises of the I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championships at the Harvard Stadium this afternoon, Yale's team, the strongest bid the East has in the games this year, is a very strong "dark horse."

Dink Templeton, Stanford coach, and Dean Cromwell, the genial director of the Southern California forces, are each conceding the meet to the other. But Stanford, twice conqueror of the Trojans in dual meets this year, seems to carry too many big guns for the rest of the contestants and can equal, if not surpass that 62½ point record established by Southern California's wonder team a year ago as it won its third successive I.C.4A title.

KEITH BROWN TO SCORE

Yale will be expected to count with Keith Brown, sophomore, whose 6-6¼ high jump and 14-[illegible] vault performances against Harvard within the space of four minutes stand out. Then there's Ed Karl Werner, a sound 48 second quarter miler in the 400 meter; George Lockwood, a place winner in the hurdles a year ago; Wirt Thompson and Frank Pierce, excellent vaulters; Hilman Holcombe, Vic Malin and Allan Converse in the hammer. Cannon and Title, distance men, may also be good for stray points.

Johnny Grady of Harvard is the only timber topper in the East who can stand up against the Californian speedsters in the low hurdles. Grady turned in a 23.5 timing against Yale last Saturday, which has been bettered only by Paul of U. S. C.

Princeton has Billy Bonthron, a place winner in the two-mile a year ago. Bonthron will drop to the 800 and 1500 meter distances in an attempt at a double victory. In the 1500 he will meet a host of Eastern stars. His main opposition in the shorter race comes from the West in Stanford's Ben Eastman.

SHOT TRIALS OPEN MEET

Today's events start at 2 o'clock with the trials in the shotput.

The high lights of the trials today: Hardy, Cornell, vs. Hables, Stanford, Parsons and Ball of U. S. C., and Jones of Penn, in the dashes; 400 metres: Warner, Yale, Ablowich, U. S. C. and Jones, Penn; 800 meters: Bonthron, Eastman and Jordan; high hurdles: Meier vs. Lockwood; low hurdles: Grady and Paul; javelin: Mottram, Stanford, Wentz, Colgate, McKenzie, U. S. C.; shot put: Stanford's big four.

The I. C. officials announced today that schoolboys will be admitted to the meet on both days for 25 cents.

Price reductions on cigars in Boston and elsewhere are nothing new. But don't forget this. Many reductions are being made because the cigars wouldn't sell at their former prices.

Not so, with the Bayuk "Phillies" —now reduced to 5 cents. Millions were sold last year at 10 cents. Millions could have been sold this year—and next year—at 10 cents.

We guarantee that the Bayuk "Phillies" you buy today in Boston —at 5 cents—is the same identical cigar as when it was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America. What other reduced-price cigar gives—or could give you this guarantee?

Stanford Has Class
Should Win Meet
Shotput Stars

Grady of Harvard
Will Display Speed
In Hurdle Race

By JACK CONWAY

Stanford University will win the intercollegiate A. A. track meet which opens in the Harvard Stadium this afternoon and finishes tomorrow afternoon. Southern California will be second with Yale third.

MR. BOSTON

John Brooks, who reports the activities of college track athletes for this newspaper, gave me the above rating of the star college track teams.

"Stanford will pick up at least 13 points in the shotput and discus events," said Brooks with much enthusiasm. "This fellow John C. Lyman of Stanford tosses the 16-pound shot as if it were a baseball. He has thrown it 52 feet ½ inch. Gordon G. Dunn of Stanford has a mark of 51 feet 11 inches. Nelson Gray, also of Stanford, has done 51 feet 1½ inches, while Henri Laborde of Stanford has tossed the shot more than 51 feet. Laborde will probably win the discus throw with a toss of 162 feet or so. Dunn and Gray are also stars in the discus event."

There once was a time when the East was supreme in the shotput and discus, but the young giants from California have forged to the front in these events in recent years.

Johnny Grady of Harvard, with a mark of 23.5 against Yale, is expected to make a bid for first place in the 200 meter low hurdles. Ed Calvin of Harvard will display his amazing ability in the 100 and 200 meter events and also in the broad jump.

One of the great races of the meet is expected in the 800 meter event when Bill Bonthron of Princeton will try to outrun Ben Eastman of Stanford. This contest will bring together the kings of the East and West at this distance.

More than 500 athletes will compete in the intercollegiates. These young men will laugh at old-time records as they go out and do their stuff. Track athletics prove better than any other branch of sports our glorious youth is still marching forward.

College Leaders Made Drastic Cut in Prices

Those persons in charge of the intercollegiate meet have made drastic cuts in the prices of tickets. They have finally realized that Old Jawn Public is a little bit shy of cash after trying to balance the budget while J. Pierpont Morgan and his merry partners paid no income taxes during the past few years. Schoolboys will be admitted to the Stadium for 25 cents. This move will interest youngsters in track sports.

Incidentally that announcement of lower football prices, with the Stadium scaled for major games, will be made shortly. Of course readers of this column had the advance tip on this proposed change last November.

Red Sox Need More Hitting in Pinches

If the Red Sox are to parade along Victory Trail, they will require more hitting in the pinches. They lost the opening game against Cleveland because they passed up numerous opportunities to knock in runs. On two different occasions three men were left on bases. A hit at either time would have given the Sox a splendid opportunity for victory.

I find the fans are solidly behind the Sox. They feel Tom Yawkey, Eddie Collins and Marty McManus are doing their utmost to produce a winning combination.

The chief weakness of the club is at shortstop. Rabbit Warstler was replaced by Bill Werber, who was secured from the Yankees. Warstler is a brilliant fielder, but a very weak hitter. Werber is a better hitter than Warstler, but his fielding has been ragged. Werber has played with much earnestness despite his errors in fielding, and may yet justify the faith Eddie Collins has in him.

It is necessary for Werber to show well in the field as well as hit. No club can expect to win close games unless it has fielding strength at shortstop. This is the most vital spot in an infield. Werber may steady down once he gets a few breaks. Even ball players have their mental hazards.

'Babe's Just Another Batter Now,' Mourns Sad Sam Jones

By PAT ROBINSON

New York, May 26 (INS)—Lou Gehrig today is a better hitter than Babe Ruth. Moreover, in a tight spot opposing pitchers fear Lou more than Babe.

Worse still, the Babe has fallen so low in their estimation they now consider him just another guy with a bat, and if given a chance they'd walk Lou any time to get a crack at Babe.

Babe's downfall as a hitter, as Sam Jones of the White Sox sees it, is due to the fact that the Bambino's not taking his old-time cut at the ball. "He doesn't shorten his grip," explains Sam. "He's simply not taking the old round-house wallop like he used to."

STILL DANGEROUS

"Of course," Sam tempers his observation, "you must remember the big guy will always be dangerous as long as he can tote a bat. He's still nobody's chump at the plate and you can't afford to monkey with him. But he's not the hitter he used to be. Gehrig is far, far tougher in a pinch. I'd rather see Babe up there."

On top of this Sam stuns you with the information that Lou and Babe are no problems for a pitcher.

HATE SLOW BALL

"If they're in a slump," says Sam, "all you have to do it pitch to them like anybody else. Plenty of slow stuff, low outside, for both.

"But if they're hot, the system's even simpler. Just walk 'em and keep on walking 'em. If you don't they might bust up a ball game for you with one wallop."

Manhattan Edges Eagles Nine, 3 to 2

New York, May 26 (AP)—The stellar pitching of Xavier Rescigno enabled the Manhattan College baseball team to give Boston College its second defeat of the season, 3 to 2.

Rescigno yielded only three hits. Bob Curran's home run in the first inning scored both runs for the Eagles.

U. S. NETMEN IN ZONE TITLE BID TODAY

Washington, May 26 (AP)—The United States Davis Cup team went out to clinch the American Zone honors today needing victory over Argentina's pressed players.

Clean-cut wins in the opening singles yesterday by Ellsworth Vines and Wilmer Allison, the American team captain, put this country's cup seekers in such a commanding position that there was little doubt as to the finish of the five-match series.

Today's play pitted Johnny Van Ryn and George Lott against Adriano Zappa, Argentina's quick-footed captain, and Adelmar Echeverria.

Even if the American doubles combinations conquer the Argentines today, however, Vines and Allison will play out the two final singles tomorrow, switching the opening day opponents.

An exhibition doubles match was arranged for this afternoon to follow the Davis Cup play. It will throw Vines and Keith Gledhill, holders of the American doubles championship, against Lott and either Van Ryn or Allison. The two pairs are almost evenly matched, and sparkling tennis was promised.

MULDOON ILL; REST ORDERED

Purchase, N. Y., May 26 (AP)—Enervated by the heat and the weight of years, William Muldoon, illustrous exponent of physical culture, who celebrated the 88th anniversary of his birth, is in bed secluded from his friends by his physician's order.

For some time the old man of boxing, sage of the New York State Athletic Commission, has been failing in health and the humid weather of the last few days and the excitement of his birthday proved too much for him.

He was in and about as usual but the burden of several telephone calls sapped his strength and when his physician, Dr. Henry T. Kelly, made his morning call he found Muldoon in bed and hardly strong enough to lift his head.

The doctor immediately ordered the telephone disconnected, barred all friends from the bedroom and prescribed absolute quiet for the patient.

Muldoon is suffering from arthritis.

Shepard-Filene Tilt Is Golf Loop Feature

Eight of the Retail Stores Golf League teams play the third round of their four-ball championship matches today at the Unicorn Country Club. The Jordan Marsh Co. quartet drew a bye.

The Wm. Filene's Sons Co.-Shepard Stores match is the feature attraction of the gathering at Unicorn. Filene's is leading the league with ten points and only [illegible] Shepard [illegible] place, with an even break.

SHEPARD LINEUP SHIFTED

Hoping to put a stop to the onrushing Filene's team, The Shepard Stores lineup is returned to its original pairing. John Shepard, 3d, teams with Ben Black and Robert Shepard will be H. M. Uline's partner.

John Shepard, 3d, and Ben Black play Jack McCarthy and A. J. Frost, and as the Filene star must give Black five strokes, a close battle is expected. The success or failure of The Shepard Stores will depend upon the No. 2 teams, H. M. Uline and Robert Shepard, [illegible].

The C. F. Hovey Co. and Slattery Co., which are tied for second place with Jordan Marsh, are pulling for The Shepard Stores to halt Filene's, for they are playing R. H. WILLIAMS IN ACTION

Chauncey S. Williams will make his first appearance in the Sears Roebuck Co. lineup teaming with Bill Nugent, Jr., against Edmund O'Connell and Paul Carver.

J. Roche and J. Howe, Hovey's, the only pair in the league that has not lost a point in two matches, will tackle Charlie Coyne and Charlie Kemp, R. H. White.

Cochet Expected to Enter Cup Play

Universal Service Special Cable

Paris, May 26.—The French Lawn Tennis Federation takes little stock in Henri Cochet's assertion that he's not going to represent France in the Davis Cup matches this year.

Cochet had stated:

"I may not play on the Davis Cup team this year. It's also not likely that Jean Borotra will play."

Cochet, who has dominated international tennis for France for many recent years until the Americans and English began knocking him off the high perch at Wimbledon two years ago, refused to discuss France's prospects of retaining the famous trophy. He said that Christian Boussus and Jacques Brugnon are "good

By Associated Press

Adoption of the metric system for measurement of track events to be used for the first time in 57 years by the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. at the championship meet starting today was condemned by a majority of members of the Track Coaches Association of America, at a meeting in the Hotel Bradford.

On a motion made by Dink Templeton of Stanford the coaches voted, 22 to 3, in opposition to the metric standard and in favor of restoring the traditional linear measurements.

The only votes in favor of the metric system, which has also been adopted by the National Amateur Athletic Union, were those of John Magee of Bowdoin, Mike Ryan of Colby and Jaako Mikkola, Harvard's javelin coach.

Templeton charged the metric system was "railroaded" through the I. C. A. A. A. A.

J. Fred Powers of Brown was elected president of the association, succeeding Edward Farrell of Harvard.

TURNESA MET. GOLF LEADER

Mamaroneck, N. Y., May 26 (AP)—Blazing his way over the winged foot course in sub-par figures, Joe Turnesa led some of the nation's greatest golfers in the first round of the Metropolitan Open Golf championship, with a 70.

Olin Dutra posted a 71 early in the day and apparently had the field whipped for the first 18 holes, when Turnesa came in with his brilliant score.

Eighteen holes will be played today, after which the field will be reduced for the final 36 holes tomorrow.

$15 Top; $2 Low for Title Fight

New York, May 26 (INS)—Ringside seat prices fixed yesterday for the Sharkey-Carnera heavyweight title bout here June 29 set a new low. "Tops" will be only $15 and general admission $2.

The show will be staged under the joint auspices of Madison Square Garden and the milk fund, of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman.

Williams Topples Tufts Nine, 3 to 2

Williamstown, May 26 (AP)—Williams defeated Tufts 3 to 2 here in a pitchers' battle between Filley of the home team and De Angelo of the Jumbos. Filley fanned 10 and gave five hits, while De Angelo struck out nine and gave six hits.

Babe Didrikson Takes Golf Seriously

Detroit, May 26 (AP)—If the women's national golf championship were decided on stamina, Babe Didrikson would be ready right now for the test.

She out-lasted three hardy males over 27 holes on the Orchard Lake course yesterday and was insisting on at least nine holes more, when her companions hobbled to the clubhouse, nursing aches, pains and sunburn.

On the last nine holes she got a 42, six over par, the best score of her career.

While Stanford and Southern California are carrying on their battle for first place in the opening exercises of the I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championships at the Harvard Stadium this afternoon, Yale's team, the strongest bid the East has in the games this year, is a very strong "dark horse."

Dink Templeton, Stanford coach, and Dean Crowell, the genial director of the Southern California forces, are each conceding the meet to the other. But Stanford, twice conqueror of the Trojans in dual meets this year, seems to carry too many big guns for the rest of the contestants and can equal if not surpass that 62½ point record established by Southern California's wonder team a year ago as it won its third successive IC4A title.

KEITH BROWN TO SCORE

Yale will be expected to count with Keith Brown, sophomore, whose 6-6¼ high jump and 14½ vault performances against Harvard within the space of four minutes stand out. Then there's F. Karl Warner, a sound 48 second quarter miler, in the 400 meter; George Lockwood, a place winner in the hurdles a year ago; Will Thompson and Frank Pierce, excellent vaulters; Hilman Holcombe, Vic Malin and Allan Converse in the hammer; Cannon and Tuttle, distance men, may also be good for stray points.

Johnny Grady of Harvard is the only timber topper in the East who can stand up against the Californian speedsters in the low hurdles. Grady turned in a 23.5 timing against Yale last Saturday, which has been bettered only by Paul of U. S. C.

Princeton has Billy Bonthron. A place winner in the two-mile a year ago, Bonthron will drop to the 800 and 1500-meter distances in an attempt at a double victory. In the 1500 he will meet a host of Eastern stars. His main opposition in the shorter race comes from the West in Stanford's Ben Eastman.

SHOT TRIALS OPEN MEET

Today's events start at 2 o'clock with the trials in the shotput.

The high lights of the trials today: Hardy, Cornell, vs. Hables, Stanford, Parsons and Ball of U. S. C., and Jones of Penn, in the dashes; 400 metres: Warner, Yale; Ablowich, U. S. C. and Jones, Penn; 800 meters: Bonthron, Eastman and Jordan; high hurdles: Meier vs. Lockwood; low hurdles: Grady and Paul; javelin: Mottram, Stanford, Wentz, Colgate, McKenzie, U. S. C.; shot put: Stanford's big four.

The I. C. officials announced today that schoolboys will be admitted to the meet on both days for 25 cents.

Johnny Hodapp is off on another hit streak. After coming out in the first inning of the opener against the Indians he connected for two singles and drew a walk. The Sox stepping second-sacker is now hitting for .369, which leaves him only one point back of second place among the leading hitters.

George Hildebrandt is taking a vacation as a plate umpire. McGowan and Summers alternate in calling balls and strikes, while Hildy shifts between first and third base.

The Senators slipped back into second place by walloping the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 2 while the league-leading Yanks and Chicago White Sox were being washed out in New York. Led by Joe Kuhel, rookie third sacker, who belted out a triple, double and a single, the Solons found a trio of Browns flingers for 14 hits, as Gen Crowder was turning in a six-hit performance.

After three defeats in a row to a Cincinnati uniform, Paul Derringer [illegible] Cardinals conquered Brooklyn's Dodgers, 3 to 1. Thus the Reds captured fourth place and the Cardinals dropped

DOUBLE ROLE SUITS RED SOX PLAYER-BOSS

By JOE CASHMAN

The brilliant all around play of Marty McManus these days gives lie to the theory that the player manager idea can't be fused successfully in the majors.

The Red Sox pilot is playing a better third-base than he did for Detroit back in 1930 when he was voted the best hot corner guardian in the league.

Bunts, smashes back of the bag, drives far to his left, those treacherous slow rollers back of the mound and all the other chances that make life miserable for a man in his position Martin Joseph comes up with and turns into easy outs. No third sacker who has been at the Fens this season covers more ground and with all his ranging around Marty has been charged with only two errors in 32 games.

His hitting too has been hard and timely. He's the club's best bet next to Hodapp for an extra base smash and most dangerous when mates are waiting to be rescued. Slumps or bad breaks never bother him. He failed once in the pinch in the opener against the Indians and smashed the ball out of the park for a home run on his next trip to the platter.

MARTY COMES THROUGH

"I want McManus to play as well as manage. I couldn't find a better third-sacker," declared Business Manager Eddie Collins during spring training.

Marty McManus, the third baseman, is vindicating his boss' judgment.

And just to keep the records straight Marty McManus the manager is also holding his own with the best of 'em. All that is possible for a pilot to do to put a club over the top Marty does and does very well. He has discipline and at the same time harmony and loyalty in the ranks. He has his charges playing smart aggressive ball and rarely indeed can his judgment be questioned. Even the chronic second guessers are for him.

All of which reminds us that managing a big league club is just about the world's most thankless task. When a club is winning the players receive the credit; when it's losing the pilot gets the blame.

Nobody was boosting Roger Peckinpaugh, Indians' boss, two weeks ago when he had his club on the roof. Today, the wolves are crying for his blood because the club is in fifth place, though it is still within three games of the top.

"If I was a good manager three weeks ago, I ought to be just as good today," says Peck.

There's no denying the logic of that remark. Yet Peck is on the spot. The Indians have been told that they must snap out of their losing streak immediately or they'll have a new boss.

INDIANS CONQUER

The boys came through for Peck in the opener here, winning 3-2, but we would hate to have been in the pilot's shoes while he was watching the performance. On three different occasions it seemed certain that the Sox would knock Mel Harder to the showers and sew up the old ball game.

Peck finally grew so nervous that he took Harder out with a two-run lead in the eighth and sent Ora Hildebrandt, his star kid, to the hill.

McManus is on no spot, yet he must have acquired as many new grey hairs as Peck during the matinee. The Sox had runners on first and third, with nobody out, in one inning, and the sacks filled with only one out in another stanza and on neither occasion did they score. Marty's home run followed Hodapp's single but, in between, Alexander hit into a double play.

The Indians earned two runs. Their third and winning marker was a gift, Cissell scoring all the way from first when Dusty Cooke, after a long run, reached but couldn't hold Averill's short fly, with two out in the fifth.

Dusty Rhodes turned in another fine game for the natives. He gave only seven hits and but three useless singles after the third. He's hurled seven excellent games this season and has exactly one victory to his credit.

NEWSPAPER RADIO TREAT Press Program Planned Tonight

Mrs. Lee Higginson Talks About Etiquette; George Givot Entertains on Air

By N. F. T.

When the "Sunday Advertiser Speaks" as per program title tonight (WNAC) at 10 o'clock, New England loudspeaker patrons will hear Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson, Jr., in a discussion based on personal observations of modern etiquette. These inspired by the new literary volume, "Nice Girls Don't Swear," from the pen of Alice Leone Moats, a truly sparkling thesis on the changing times as reflected in manners.

* * *

Also featured during this fast moving 15 minute newspaper presentation, is the character type originated and popularized by the handsome young George Givot. His humorous "Greek Ambassador of Good Will" mimicry has won him stage, screen and radio fame from coast to coast. George begins his week of footlight appearance in person at the Metropolitan today.

* * *

Just previous to the above program, Edwin C. Hill has one of the most striking of his colorful "Inside Story" personalities on the air (WNAC), from 9:30 until 10 as he outlines the adventurous life of Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

* * *

Chicago has that "World's Fair" program waiting to go coast-to-coast late tonight (WEEI) at 11:30. Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois acts as radio host to representatives of many nations. Ceremonies attending "Coronation of the Queen" are being included to officially open the big Century of Progress Exposition.

* * *

Amelia Earhart Putnam goes up in the air over Manhattan tonight (WNAC), taking a microphone and Ted Husing along in her plane. Thus will be launched the gala new "Around-the-Town" hour, during which stage stars and New York night club headliners are to likewise participate between 8 and 9 o'clock.

* * *

Harry Michaels, half of the "Grin and Bearit" team broadcasting hereabouts, although which half he is we don't know, is airing a special piano arrangement of the scintillating "Sweetheart Darlin'" tune from Marion Davis' newest screen triumph, "Peg O' My Heart." It comes over (WBZ-WBZA) this evening at 5 o'clock.

Aircaster Says: New White House Voice

By AIRCASTER

While it is true that President Roosevelt has shown a tendency to use the facilities of radio at frequent intervals, the kilocycles have lacked any sort of a schedule by which the Voice of the White House may be heard on regular occasions. It has long been the dream of the networks to effect such an arrangement, but not until signatures were affixed yesterday, did there seem any likelihood of realization.

It will be WEAF on which the Voice of the White House will be heard weekly, on Sunday nights, beginning June 4. The Voice will be that of Louis McHenry Howe, whom Edwin C. Hill has described as "The Medieval Gnome," the confidential advisor, and confidant of the President. It seems that the parent company of the WEAF-WJZ chain has signed up Howe, together with an interviewer, Walter Trumbull, and each week the questioner will begin at 10 p. m. to elicit such inside information about what is going on in Washington as might engage the attention of the audience. Col. Howe is the first member of a Presidential "unofficial family" to accept a commercial assignment for the radio.

THE KING GESTURES

King George of England took orders from a radio man yesterday—and liked it. And then he started giving orders which upset completely the previous schedule of his broadcast to America, when he opens the World Economic Conference on June 12. Originally, King George, whom the local eavesdroppers may recall, talks with an accent that sounds very American, was scheduled to talk for American ears at 6 o'clock in the morning of the conference.

"But," protested Cesar Saerchinger, the foreign representative of WABC, "a lot of people got up out of bed to hear you last year. It was a novelty. You'd never addressed them before. They won't do it again—that is, many of them won't. How about changing the time to later in the day—then all my countrymen will hear you?"

The King's English might not have been just like this, but what he said in effect was: "That's a swell idea, and you can call again and I'll give you the new schedule."

Saerchinger called later and the King assured him that everything had been taken care of and that the conference would be opened later than planned and that the King's speech on June 12 will be heard at 10 a. m., American time.

I WANTED TO KNOW

There were ever so many things I wanted to know on a tour of the studios the other night, and obligingly the studio help assisted me in discovering this trivia—

When they pop a ginger ale bottle on a commercial broadcast the announcer is entitled to drink the beverage.

Guests in the studios are, by tradition, entitled to morsels cooked by household experts, and it's their own fault.

During the Jack Dempsey broadcasts, when the ex-champ socks a villain, what really happens is this: A lad about 4 feet tall crushes a strawberry box.

All radio applause is done by cues. Nobody ever hisses a performance, for the reason that the audience is seeing a free show.

Ed Wynn must wear a ludicrous hat to catch the spirit of a show, because he believes hats are the basis of humor.

OFF THE TICKER

A new client will bring Chic Sale to the air via WEAF, and not Al Jolson, as has been rumored . . . Fannie Brice and George Olsen have renewed 16 more weeks . . . Street Singer opens a new series at WABC, June 5, at 9:15 p. m. . . . The Georgetown News, Washington, devotes much space to quarreling over the huge salaries paid to air comics for broadcasting stale gags, and cites a radio executive as having dropped this pearl: "No radio star is worth $2000 and up for a net of 20 minutes on the air, unless it is the last 20 minutes of his life."

WASHINGTON—Chalk up a new triumph for science! Score Horace Walpole Frisby with another victory in his upward climb to the dizzy heights of success. The "People's Pal" has perfected the Frisby Faultless Vertical Draught Brace, which will practically revolutionize the engineering principle of pants suspension.

"Oh, it's nothing at all," said Frisby, modestly, as he emerged from the Patent Office waving a mysterious document. "I have merely applied science to braces, thus affording more comfort to mankind by eliminating undue compression of the torso to permit full play of the abdominal (or stomach) muscles. Why should man be slave to his suspenders? My thought is to make the suspenders slave to the man."

The Supine Surrender of American Principles at Geneva

A RATHER bad day for America, fellow citizens!

We refer, of course, to what took place on Monday at the Geneva Disarmament Conference.

We thought the Washington Disarmament Conference, when Secretary of State Hughes, without offset or recompense, sank the newest and finest ships in the American Navy, marked the limit of injury to the United States which could be self-inflicted.

It was nothing, however, compared to the amazing surrender at Geneva of our country's strength and security made in the name of the American people by a spokesman who no more speaks their wishes, convictions or purposes than the man in the moon.

The first official act of George Washington, upon inauguration as the first President of the United States, was the declaration of America's neutrality in the wars then convulsing Europe.

In the century and a half of the nation's life the policy of neutrality in conflicts to which we were not a party has protected us from the ravages of recurring wars, exempted us from the passions engendered by them and assured our peaceful growth and development as a nation.

* * *

ON Monday at Geneva this wise and beneficent principle of American policy was tossed to the winds.

And with it that most American of principles—the freedom of the seas.

To relinquish this natural, and, to a maritime power such as the United States, essential right, will be regarded by the American people as the most abject of surrenders. On more than one occasion in the past we have gone to war in defense of this right. And we will go again if need be. Its surrender will never be tolerated or condoned.

The oft-repeated refusal of the United States to bind itself in a consultative pact with Europe and thus make itself a party and a judge in the innumerable, incessant and clouded controversies of that feud-infested continent, was forgotten in a moment.

Without mandate from the people, without even their knowledge, without warning to Congress and without an opportunity afforded either the Senate or House to speak, it is stated on behalf of the unsuspecting United States that "we are willing to consult the other States in case of a threat to peace."

Like children playing with firearms, the improvised statesmanship of the hour ignores the lessons of our history, rejects the warnings of experience, defies the restraints of the Constitution and whirls us to the brink of untold disaster.

* * *

SHOULD war break out, and sober opinion regards war under the surcharged conditions now prevailing in the world as an almost certain eventuality, we have involved ourselves in that most difficult and dangerous of undertakings—the designation of the aggressor.

What happens to us upon such designation is left in apparent obscurity, but it is only apparent. What we say is that we will "refrain" from any action tending to defeat the collective efforts of the nations who join with us in such designation.

But the consequences to us of taking part in so dangerous an operation are not limited by our declarations of intention. Such a designation would be deeply resented by the nation so designated and would certainly be regarded as an act of war, particularly if our abstention from the assertion of neutral rights were interpreted as giving support to such designation by an overt act of hostility. This would be entirely reasonable, as the departure from the conduct of a neutral could not fail to be regarded as the conduct of a belligerent. We should be charged, and rightly, with having cast the weight of our attitude against a nation from whom we had received neither provocation nor injury.

In addition to these objections to the tenor and substance of the Geneva statement of America's altered policy, there hangs over it a sickening insincerity of interpretation.

It is evidently the purpose of the Administration to convince France and Germany of our intention to guarantee their mutual peace and security by concrete and definite collaboration and support.

Although we invite this interpretation in Europe, it is not at all the conclusion which we ask our own people to draw.

* * *

WHILE the London Times refers to the Democratic Administration as proposing to change the traditional attitude of the United States toward the whole question of neutrality and freedom of the seas, Secretary Hull on the other hand regards the Geneva statement as reserving to the United States Government full liberty of judgment and action.

It is open to question who are the more deceived—the people of Europe or the people of the United States.

We can say this, however—the people of the United States will not long be deceived.

They are a hard-headed people. They know how to effectuate their will and how on occasion to manifest their resentment if convinced that American principles have been betrayed or American interests compromised.

They are children of the day, not of the night, nor of the darkness. They watch and are sober.

They do not propose that sudden destruction shall come upon them, as a thief in the night.

Sound Sales Tax Gains Powerful Converts

If Congress will put its ears to the ground it should hear the unmistakable ground swell of popular resentment against its announced determination to jam through a revenue bill that retains all of the present obxnovious excise (nuisance) taxes and not only retains but INCREASES the present iniquitous Federal income taxes.

It should recognize that the nation-wide demand for a soundly-conceived manufacturers' sales tax has become irresistible.

It should learn that recently there has been a hasty, significant retreat by leading opponents of the sales tax idea.

It should become familiar with the fact that Capital and Labor not only advocate but demand sound sales tax laws.

Congress should discover that President Roosevelt himself, who has been opposed to the sales tax, indicated to Congressional leaders that he would NOT veto such a revenue-raising measure to finance governmental operations and Federal unemployment relief.

Then Congress should recognize this nation-wide demand by rejecting the recommendation of the House Ways and Means Committee to increase present income taxes; it should turn to Canada and profit by the experience of our neighbor of the north. In Canada the sales tax has been an integral part of the revenue-raising system for years, and today, levied at four per cent, it is regarded as "painless."

It has proved to be simple in operation, easily collectible and CERTAIN in its yield.

Events have proved that the income tax does NOT yield its expected share of revenues; that the rich escape it by placing their wealth in tax-exempt securities and that the bulk of the tax burden falls unjustly on the great middle class—the creative class—the workers, the thinkers, the doers, the artisans, the artists and professional classes.

The nation has come to recognize that the present income tax is a tax on thrift and industry, penalizing initiative and punishing enterprise and is a serious blight on business at a time when business needs encouragement.

William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, has made a complete turnabout in his views. Withdrawing his previous opposition, HE NOW FAVORS A SALES TAX as a means of providing the sinews for a governmental program of relief of unemployment.

In his testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee Mr. Green advocated a modified sales tax, exempting medicine and certain foodstuffs. Of the sales tax he said:

> "If the sales tax is imposed then everybody will be paying something. Then why should not every community in the country benefit from it? The Government then can make outright grants to any State, city or town that has a worth-while public works project ready to start."

Speaking for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Henry I. Harriman, president, said:

> "We favor a general manufacturers' sales tax to provide part of the revenue needed by the Government. . . . The manufacturers' sales tax is the fairest item on the Treasury's alternative tax program. . . ."

It is gratifying to the Hearst newspapers, which for many years have advocated the sales tax principle, to find such growing enthusiasm in important quarters.

The sales tax is needed now as an emergency measure to finance the Federal re-employment projects.

After it has demonstrated its merit it can be used later to supplement permanent taxes, and make possible a reduction in burdensome income taxes.

Congress will be remiss in its duty if it fails to heed the popular nation-wide sales tax demand.

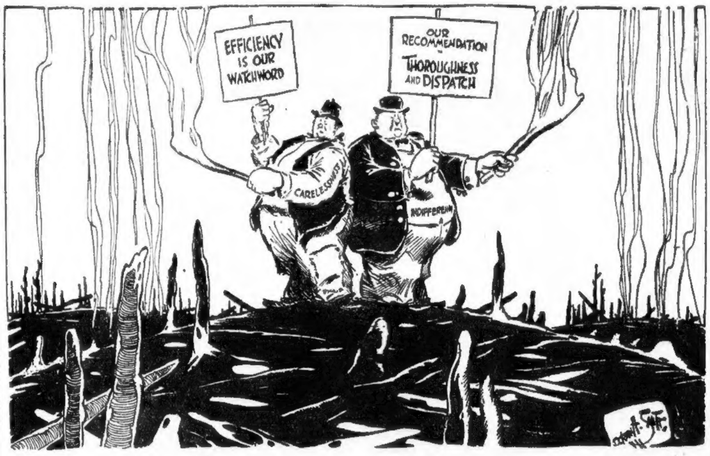
The Incendiaries



EFFICIENCY IS OUR WATCHWORD
OUR RECOMMENDATION — THOROUGHNESS AND DISPATCH
CARELESSNESS
INDIFFERENCE

Vacation season is at hand. Warm weather and sunny days will bring again the necessity for carefulness in spreading destructive fires.

As people resume their treks in increasing numbers to the great outdoors, they should be alert to the menace to other people's property, or to the property of the State, that indifference to the fire hazard may cause. Massachusetts' fine outing places, and those of the rest of New England, deserve to be protected.

Carelessness in extinguishing camp fires, or in throwing away lighted cigars and cigarettes, may cause great damage.

Each motorist, each hiker, each camper should keep these hints in mind.

Men, Women and Things

NEW YORK, May 26—Thoughts while strolling: Victor Moore walks like a penguin. And Bobby Clark's profile is a ringer for Herbie Swope's. What became of Martha Hedman? And Gypsy O'Brien? Grand actresses, they were. Funny, how Al Smith likes braid on his suit. Has courage to wear it, too.

One word description of Hype Igoe—gritty. Incongruously enough, nothing suggests calm like a windmill. William Bolitho summed up New York accurately with: "It seeks smartness by hiding enthusiasm." Desolating thought: Broadway will no longer be enlivened by Wilson Mizner and Grant Clark.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, an Atchison, Kans. boy, who made good in the city. I may get over it, but I still can't pass the Empire building without involuntary shudder. That taxi driver has Jim Tulley's mop of hair—like fire in a thornbush. Depressing to see youngsters on way to school. How I hated it!

One of my favorite people—W. G. Shepherd. The name of that sign will have me jittering the rest of the day—Maclin McGee Marouse. They say the Jay O'Briens, deah, deah, use only pink sheets and pillow slips and carry them on travels. Clemenceau slept in pink flannel nighties, too.

You can't put anything on Ernest Truex that will make him look dressed up. Oo, oo! what big eyes Nancy Carroll has!

The stage has produced few happier marrieds than Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer. Miss Sawyer deserted the stage entirely for domesticity and Santley confines activities chiefly to directing and producing. Nothing can induce him to miss a dinner at home—not even "just one more bottle pool game" at the Lambs. Exhaust vapors of a theatrical night life never seared him. Today, in early 40's, he could still execute those romantic heroisms of the days when he was three-sheeted across the land as "the boy actor."

Another expression of marital happiness is that of Julia Sanderson and Frank Crummit. At that period of professional life when they were entitled to bask in roseate glow of past glories, they went to new success on the radio. They motor to the studios from their Connecticut home. One is never seen without the other—save, of course, on Crummit's visit to the Lambs, where his popularity recently caused him to be elected Shepherd. This is the highest office in the gift of that famous institution sentimentalizing the hospitality of Charles and Mary Lamb toward London theatrical folk.

I looked in at Conte's on Lafayette street the other evening. Long ago it was the rendezvous of Italian politicians and artists, especially opera singers. Now out of the restaurant zone, its patronage is no longer that of other days, although still substantial. The stone building, whose facade is a brave and balconied outwork of austerity, is 101 years old. In the rear is a garden with ribbed iron benches, a spreading yew and one of those miniature bowling games so popular among Italians.

There's a tingle watching that finished trouper, Charles King. No one has a greater artistry in putting over a song. There is nothing about his routine that suggests being inspired; rather is it polished workmanship. He tilts his silk hat with a delicate, studied touch. The energy of his walk, the timing of his mannerisms, the upward glances toward the balcony—all constitute a showmanship only acquired by years of studying audience reaction. Plus, of course, an earnestness to please.

There is the yarn about the philanthropist and department store genius, Jesse I. Straus, arriving in Paris to accept the American ambassadorship. "Galeries Lafayette," he is reputed to have cried, "we are here!" To which President Lebrun responded: "Macy beacoup!"

This might be one for Harold Ross's "The New Yorker" from a real life pastel today. A sad-eyed gentleman with the forehead of a Spanish mackerel, a vacuous expression and teeth-for-three stood gazing at the passing throng. Above him a large sign read: "Information!"

And there is a frayed and forlorn postcard in the mail today from a cactus stop in old Mexico. It trumpets: "Peace has broke out down here again!"

Oil Farm Halted

South Boston's Beauty Saved by Clergy

The people of South Boston have won a notable victory in the revocation of the plan to establish an oil farm in East First Street.

Mind you, the Street Commission had already granted permission for four tanks capable of storing 80,000 barrels of fuel oil.

The oil farm would have been established, with its threat to the safety of life and with its certain impairment of property value, had not public sentiment been aroused by the aggressive activity of Rev. Fr. Waters, pastor of St. Eulalia's Church, and the Rev. Mr. Dennen of the Episcopal City Mission.

The lower end of South Boston, stretching to City Point, is one of the most beautiful and attractive sections of the Greater City and is ideally situated for residential purposes.

Its beauty and availability ought to be preserved, surely at a time when the country has come to realize that the slums sections of any city are a menace to health and to real values.

Had the people of South Boston not been alert to their own interests, and ready to fight for them, their end of the city would have been abused of its lovely charm which Nature had given it.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

I Spoil a Fisherman's Day

Said I to him: "It must be fine
To dream above a rod and line!
To try to catch the lilting song
Of waters rippling all day long;
Sometimes to turn a questioning eye
Up to the glory of the sky
And wonder why such charm should be Fashioned for men like you and me.

"Look! There's a cardinal up there
Flooding with song the morning air!
Somewhere I'm sure, and very near,
His gray-garbed mate delight to hear
That silver voice, and in her breast
Throbs pride for one so gayly dressed.
Tonight it will be ours to say
'We've seen a cardinal today!'

"This curious silence noisy seems
With hammering of thoughts and dreams;
Constantly, birth, death, youth, and age
In God's great business here engage.
Strange mysteries lie thick about.
How came the rainbow to the trout?
And why, deep in the forest's gloom,
Should pink and white trifolium bloom?

"Here are a thousand worlds or more
For man to fathom and explore.
Who knows the secrets of that patch
Which marks another insect hatch?
Are those frail creatures born in vain
To suffer just an instant's pain?"
The fisherman then turned to me:
"Shut up! You talk too much!" said he.

Words of the Wise Men

There is no courage but in innocence, no constancy but in an honest cause.

Avoid extremes and shun the fault of such who still are pleased too little or too much.

The wise make tools of whatever comes to hand.

It's a good blade that bends well.
